

Seeking Licenses to Wed : Riding to Montana on War Horse : Tennessee War Hero

THIS IS one of the busiest months of the twelve in Cupid's Philadelphia headquarters. Grooms-to-be and brides-elect are crowding the marriage license office in City Hall seeking the legal credentials for the wedding.

Evening Public Ledger Photo...

POISED FOR the leap. A fair little Washington diver ready to spring into the capital's outdoor swimming pool. The pond is charmingly situated in the shadow of the Washington Monument and is used by the young people of the capital.

U. S. U. Photo...

HOME AGAIN. Sergeant Alvin C. York, the Tennessee soldier who is looked upon as the war's greatest hero, back in the cabin with the old tin wash basin again. His mother and sister stand admiringly by.

JACK GLICKMAN, cowboy soldier, demobilized last week at Camp Dix, is going to see the country he fought for. He bought his horse, Teddy, at the camp remount station for a 1900-mile trip across country to his home, Miles City, Montana.

AMERICAN FOOD to starving Balkans. A Serbian woman receiving her daily allotment of rice at the American Red Cross station established at Pirot, Serbia.

Evening Public Ledger Photo...

SECRETARY OF the Navy Daniels and Rear Admiral Scales, superintendent of the naval academy, at Annapolis, and invited guests on the way to the drill hall to attend the naval academy graduation exercises. The class numbered 454, the largest in the history of the academy.

I. F. S. Photo...

MEMBERS OF the Austrian peace delegation to the Paris conference out for a constitutional stroll at St. Germain.