

Wild Life of Adirondacks Appeals to Philadelphians

Scores of Vacationists From This City Already Have Answered the Call to Health in Happy Hills

When a tourist asked of a well-known Adirondack hotelman toward the close of last summer why the region is so popular among residents of Philadelphia he "said something" to use the vernacular of the streets.

"Why," exclaimed he, "I have been going about this region now for the last month and everywhere I encounter people from Philadelphia. It seems as if they were almost numerous as those from New York city."

Were the gentleman to visit the Adirondacks this summer the chances are he would find it even more difficult to determine the preponderance of sojourners from New York city over those from "Philly" in the heart of the happy hills. The affinity of Philadelphia for the Adirondacks has never been satisfactorily explained and probably never will be, but by the indisputable hotel register, it exists and this season's advance bookings indicate that it is stronger than ever before. Philadelphia is leasing camps and cottages; Philadelphia is leasing resorts; Philadelphia is leasing hotels and Philadelphia is leasing vacationists without number are writing to inquire about the motor routes into and out of the Adirondack country. From Albany to Plattsburg, from the shores of Lake Champlain to the Saranac and St. Regis lakes, the great "playground of the people" will team with thousands of vacationists and prominent among them will be the largely increasing delegation from the Quaker City.

Park Always Popular

The popularity of the Adirondacks among sojourners from Philadelphia in reality constitutes a compliment to the city's appreciation of the artistic and unusual in nature, for it is doubtful if in all the world there is to be found a region better adapted to the needs of a pleasure-seeking public than are the great North Woods of northern New York. Many regions boast bigger mountains, others larger lakes, but rare indeed is the combination of mountains and lakes, to be found throughout the great Adirondack Park. Beside the monarch of the range is found some placid sheet of water. Paralleling the rail and motor approaches to the region are wonderful water routes over which one day journey by canoe hundreds of miles without leaving the water save for an occasional "carry." Through every pass in the rock wall encircling the region a river tears along from its birthplace in the higher levels to the larger lakes and then onward to the sea. It is this wonderful network of lakes, rivers and small streams, found laving the feet of giant peaks at altitudes from 1600 to 2000 feet above the sea that furnishes the element of surprise to the sojourner paying his first visit to the Adirondacks. Covering more than 60,000 acres, these waterways include lakes like those of the Saranac chain, Lake Placid, the St. Regis chain, the Fulton chain, Blue Mountain lake and others which, in addition to comparing favorably, concerns size, with the lakes of the lowlands, are set amid natural surroundings beautiful to a degree baffling description.

Next to these peculiar qualifications with which it has been endowed by nature the ranking asset of the Adirondack country from the standpoint of the vacationist is the accessibility of the region. Within a day by rail from Philadelphia, overnight from New York, is found this wonderful region, combining all the thrills of life in portions which, as far as environment goes, are as far removed from civilization as are the wilds of Canada, with portions wherein part of entertaining summer sojourners has been advanced to a degree unexcelled in any other portion of this or other countries.

Two Roads to Resort.

From Albany, the parting of their ways, two rail routes afford approach to the Adirondack region, one on either side of the great park, a union again being effected at Saranac Lake and at Lake Placid, terminus for both routes, in the very heart of the region. Via Utica, Fulton Chain and Saranac Inn on the western slope of the mountains, the Adirondack division of the New York Central system arrives at Lake Clear Junction where a branch connects with Saranac Lake and Lake Placid. The Delaware and Hudson system, skirting the western shore of Lake Champlain with stops at Westport for that village and Elizabethtown; at Port Kent, for that village and famous Au Sable Chasm; at Bluff Point, location of Hotel Champlain, and at Cliff Haven, location of the Catholic Summer School of America, arrives at Plattsburgh, where connection is made with the Chateaugay Division over the rails of which the trip of eighty-three miles to Saranac Lake and Lake Placid is made.

From the south the present means of approach to the region by automobile is over the famous Quebec-Miami highway which from Albany, extends northward through Saratoga to the village of Lake George on the beautiful lake of the same name and thence on to Elizabethtown, the principal motor center of the Adirondack region and from which entry into the mountains really begins. For those lovers of beauty and admirers of the historical, there is the alternate

Gateway for Motorists

Elizabethtown, motor entrance to the mountains, is delightfully situated in Pleasant Valley through which meanders the idyllic Boquet river on its way to Lake Champlain. From Elizabethtown two routes to Plattsburg offer, the shorter though more difficult one via the so-called Pole-O-Moonshine road leading over the mountain of that name and the other, via the state road to Keene Center, AuSable Forks, Keeseville and Plattsburg, with which are combined the state road extension through Wilmington Notch to Lake Placid, Saranac Lake, Saranac Inn, Paul Smith's, Moulton Lake and Malone and the short side trips to Port Kent, Bluff Point and Hotel Champlain and the Catholic Summer School of America.

It is at the village of Jay that the broad state highway, leading through the village of Wilmington and on through beautiful Wilmington Notch, leaves the parent route, the Quebec-Miami highway and swings sharply to the west into the heart of the mountains. The route which follows the winding course of the west branch of the AuSable river through the Notch is one of the most beautiful to be found in this country. Midway of the Notch is High Falls, a rock-walled chasm through which the river plunges on its way to Lake Champlain. Miles further on the river, just before entering the lake, passes through famous AuSable Chasm, of which High Falls is a replica in miniature.

Present to the citizens of this Great Republic these prophetic words of Napoleon Bonaparte in his address to a young man leaving for America:

"You soon depart for the Western and I for the Eastern Hemisphere. A new career of mine is opened before me and I hope to make my name with you and with the great events and the great greatness of the republic; yet you are familiar with me when I beheld at once the simple manners of the first age of Rome and the luxury of her decline; where I see the taste, the sensibility and science of Athens, with her factions, and the valor of Sparta without her discipline."

"As a citizen of the world, I would address your country in the following language: Every man and every nation is ambitious, and ambition therefore, a national strength; strengthen your political institutions; remember that armies and navies are of the same use in the world as the police of London and Paris, and soldiers are not made like other men, in a minute; cultivate union; your empire will be like a colossus of gold fallen in the earth; broken in pieces, and the prey of foreign and domestic warlords. If you are wise, your republic will be permanent and, perhaps, Washington will be hailed the founder of a glorious and happy country, when the name of Bonaparte shall be obscured by succeeding revolutions."

"Therefore, ye citizens of this nation would it not be wise in your leisure moments and while holidaying to visit the dearest parts of your Republic and endeavor to acquire the wonderful lessons that have been given to your people to develop and protect for the benefit of the 80 million millions, who through your protection at this time will inherit the rule on which democracy will be insured for all time and while journeying why not visit Niagara Falls, the great wonder of this New World, and cross over the borders of your great ally to the north, the Dominion of Canada, whose men have given of their strength and blood in France and Flanders so that this great and glorious heritage would be preserved in your name and their name for all time.
