Pays Real Money and Takes Youthful Phenom From Columbia, S. C., Ball Club-No Danger of Trading Bobby Roth or Scott Perry

> By ROBERT W. MAXWELL Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1919, by Public Ledger Co.

CONNIE MACK'S long absence from the ball yard has caused much conjecture since last Saturday, but the mystery finally has been solved. The lean leader did not don the false whiskers and wear his rubber beels to go on a scouting trip to find some each customers for his ball yard, although four or five thousand a day would help some. He made a journey through the tall grass, spent some time in rural communities and when the time came he doffed the spinnch, shined up the badge, reached out a lean, sinewy arm and grabbed an athlete who plays first base for the Columbia, S. C., team in the South Atlantic League-whatever that is.

That's the real dope on Connie's conniving conquest in the fried ham belt, to say nothing of the hot bisenit circuit. The news limped over the wires last night, but like all reports from that section of the country it was delightfully indefinite. It contained everything but the name of the youthful phenom. which makes it in-trickit or something like that. However, the works are in, Counie crossed the calloused palm of the David Harum of Columbia, S. C. with pieces of eight, doubloous and other monetary scenery he had concealed about his person and the athlete will be delivered here, charges prepaid.

This deal has been on the fire for some time. Lee Gooch, who left fielded for Connie a couple of years ago and left by request when too many fly balls bounced off his head into the bleachers, is the Chris Columbus of the net. He discovered the first baseman and sent Mack a litter extalling the ability of the verdant morning glory. Connic politely read the epistle, filed it with a million other notes of the same character and began to worry about something else. Gooch sent him a stronger manuscript. Connie sat up and took notice. threw his Palm Beach suit into his traveling bag and beat it so thward.

He closed the deal on Tnesday, because the limping report from the South says so. He paid real money for the first baseman, and if this deal has any significance you can figure it out for yourself.

CONNIE returned this morning, exuding onthusiasin in every pore. He had the name and history of the new phenom and spoke as follows:

"The name of the new star is Marris Burrus. He is theenty-one years old, cames from North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College and is the most likely looking athlete I ever have seen. He handles himself like Hal Chase, bats and throws left handed and will be a sensation in the league. Although I have a good first haveman, this boy had so much class that I couldn't afford to pass him up."

No Chance of Trading Bobby Roth to Another Club

WHILE in Cleveland we saw a big story in one of the papers stating that Connie was enger, anxious and willing to trade Bobby Roth to some american League club, and the sooner a deal was made the better he would be satisfied. The next day it was said that Harry Frazee was talking turkey to Manager Mack and was ready to turn over Mike McNally and Jack Barry for the slugging outfielder.

Where there is smoke there usually is fire, but in this particular case the atuff is hokum. Bobby Roth will not be traded to any ball club. He will remain on the A's as the regular right fielder and will stick with the ball club until he trips over his whiskers. He is playing a great game now, is hitting the ball hard and often, drives in runs and is one of the most valuable athletes on the Shibe payroll.

Bobby was dissatisfied early in the season. He hurt his back, hunged up a couple of fingers, fell into a batting slump and was ready to jump off the dock. He wore an eighteen-karat grouch and was as companionable as a guy trying to quench a 2 per cent thirst. He was anything but a bright little ray of sunshine. But everything is changed now.

When Harry Davis came back to the club Roth went to Connis Mack and asked to be relieved of the duties as captain.

"Davis is the man for the job." he said, "and I want to resign in his

A Few Arguments

JESS WILLARD as a physical proposition evidently looks good to Major Cushman A. Rice. And the major should have a pretty fair idea of what physical condition means. On one occasion he went on a big-game hunt through Tibet alone, spending a year there without seeing a white man. On another occasion he put in ten months potting Siberian tigers, where very few adventurers would care to go. He was an aviator in France, sithough beyond the age of thirty-five, was wounded and came near starting west for the final hike. He writes: "I have been out to see Willard several times and he is far from being a poor, broken-down old man. He is in good shape even this far ahead. Dempsey must be very good to win."

DEMPSEY is undoubtedly good. But a 195-pounder who can beat Willard will have to be a wiz.

Fifty-five Pounds Too Much to Concede

ALL championship imbrolglios develop burning debates. Passionate oratory flutters back and forth at a rapid pace.

One debater contends that Dempsey will be at as big a disadvantage against Willard as Benny Leonard would be against Dempsey. "Fifty-five pounds," he says. "is fifty-five pounds." Willard is fifty-five pounds heavier than Dempsey and Dempsey is only fifty-five pounds heavier than Leonard. What's the difference?

Fifty-five pounds is undoubtedly fifty-five pounds. There's no argument about that. But there is this difference-a 140-pounder hasn't anything like the walloping force that a 195-pounder carries.

But a 195-pounder can have almost the same walloping power that a 250pounder can shoot. . . .

Dean't hit anushers in that as hard as Willard-whereas. Leonard Dean't hit anywhere in the same neighborhood with Dempsey. Leonard would be a joke against any average heavyweight above 190. Whereas, Dempsey has dropped several average heavyweights above 230.

The Case of Fitz

How about Fitzsimmons? you might ask. Fitz. weighing 156, could hit with any 200-pounder. Quite so., But Fitz, from the waist up, was built like a 200-pounder. And in this game you don't punch with your legs or feet.

And Fitz happened to be one of those citizens who carried enormous leverage. He had the steel spring stuff in either arm. And leverage is a vital factor when it comes to hitting hard, whether it be a baseball or boxing.

Schulte had as much leverage as any ball player we ever saw. Mc-Loughlin had tremendous leverage in tennis. He was another steel-spring

Norman Maxwell, the young Philadelphia golfer, weighed only 120 pounds. He is slight of frame, with no bulk in either shoulders or chest. Yet Maxwell was a terrific hitter, one of the longest in the game. Husky sluggers around 180 and 190, with height and length of reach far beyond Maxwell's range, were unable to drive within ten yards of him. Maxwell had unusual leverage. His timing was, of course, good, but he needed the other in copious quantities to get the distance he obtained

B<sup>OBBY</sup> BYRNE, the Kerry Patch kid, a member of St. Louis and Pittsburgh ball club, was far from being any troglodyte. Bobby wasn't very large. But he could drive a baseball a mile, and after he took up golf became a long hitter in short order. All for the same reason-leverage.

Cub Pitching

WITH the return of summer heat the power of the Cub pitching staff is now beginning to be shown.

There isn't another staff in baseball to be compared to Chicago's talent. Alexander, Vaughn and Tyler make a great staff, unaided. But Claude Hen-drix has now begun to contribute as much stuff as any of the Big Three, and young Martin has shown his ability to go the route.

Four fine pitchers, working in turn, will come pretty close to winning any pennant. Recall what Rudolph. Tyler and James did for the Braves of 1914, when the Braves were only able to average around two runs a day.

THIS Cub combination should be the best or most effective pitching staff through the last decade. It got away slowly, with Alexander needing more time to slip back into form. He is about right now, so keep a sceather eye peeled on that Cook county machine from mid-June on.

favor. If I can't resign I'll quit the job anyway.

That was a manly offer to make, and since that time Bobby has improved wonderfully. He is connecting safely every day and, best of all, he comes through with timely bingles when there are a couple of his playmates hanging around the sacks. He also is playing a swell game in the field and is one of the best outposts in the league.

CONNIE will not trade Roth this year. He needs high class players, is scouring the country for them, and he would have to look pretty hard to discover a man almost as good as Biffing Bobby.

Scott Perry Is Recovering From an Injury

A NOTHER rumor was spiked yesterday when Harry Davis announced posi-tively that Scott Perry was NOT on the market and never would be. The big pitcher, who has been absent for the last week, is suffering from an injured aide and is under a doctor's care.

"Perry hurt himself in one of the games." said Davis. "but said nothing about it. When we started him last week Connie saw there was something wrong after he had pitched one ball and soon took him out. Then we learned he had strained his side and the injury had every appearance of a broken rib. Scott went to the University Hospital, had an X ray taken and then took a long rest to recover. That's the reason for Perry's absence."

Harry Davis, who has been managing the club in the absence of Mack and piled up a winning streak of two straight games, saw that same streak go foole yesterday afternoon because Tilly Walker played Austin's single like a blacksmith and allowed it to roll to the center field wall for a home run. That was one of the slip-ups during the afternoon, and it was a costly one. That one run gave the St. Looie Browns the long end of a 4 to 3 verdict.

Tom Rogers hurled for our folks and managed to get himself in bad at the start of every inning after the second. The first man up always got on base and that gave the burler additional worry and labor. In the fourth he grooved one for Sister, and George did nothing but lift the ball out of the lot over the right field fence for a homer.

WALTER KINNEY, who succeeded Rogers in the ninth, was a lucky guy to get by without having a flock of runs come over the pan. He walked three men, but managed to retire the side without d score.

Big Boxing Bouts Will Be Staged Here

THE boxing game is going big this summer and Philadelphia will have its share of the good matches. Jimmy Dougherty is planning to stage a big how the latter part of next month and has Jack Dempsey's promise to appear whether he wins from Willard or not. Dougherty will get the best warsweight in the business to oppose him and will begin work after July 4.

In the meantime Leon Rains will entertain at the Phillies' ball park, and first show will be staged on Monday night. Benny Leonard, lightweight n, meets Johnny Dundee, Irish Patsy Cline boxes Eddie Moy and Greb will put on a slugfest with Joe Borrell. This is a classy, fight-

Rains also has Johnny Kilbane booked to meet Joey Fox on the night of 30. Kilbane has started training and wired he would be in great shape the bout. If successful with Fox, he is likely to nieet Lew Tendler.
