Here to Help You Keep Cool and Make Your Summer Home Attractive

Appreciative Visitors to Westminster Abbey

will remember their interest in the sculpture and marble tablets that crowd the walls and floors of Great Britain's lofty Temple of Remembrance of their overlords of war, statesmanship and literature.

Who has not noticed and wondered at the many colored lights that illuminated parts of the floors and walls at certain hours of the day, when the sun struck through the marvelously costly and artistically beautiful stained glass windows?

The day will come, many of us hope, when at the nation's capital at Washington a temple as stately as Westminster will be erected for the remembrance of the heroes of America, to which shall be carried our Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Grant, Franklin, Choate and other eminent Americans who have served their nation well.

Let us for our world-famous city take the old Washington Square for a graveyard again, as dedicated by our fathers, and erect the Pennsylvania Cathedral of Remembrance in honor of the thousand and more of our state troops who lie in heaps in the French cemeteries.

China and Glassware and Civilization

China and glassware are a social asset, not merely in the domestic sense, but in the sense that they are so much a part of civilization

Indispensable as cooks are to civilized man, china and glassware are as much so.

We know how the particularly delectable quality of the most superlative dish or draught that art, or alchemy, or nature, or all three combined, can produce would evanesce if we had to partake of it from some coarse-surfaced and forbidding receptacle, unworthy of its ambrosial properties. The man who first made china, that is, the man who found a way of putting a smooth, hard, clean shiny surface
