

New Vacation Home for Youngsters : War-Scarred Cathedral : Ready to Anchor Dirigible

CHERRY TIME at the new vacation home for youngsters at Broomall, on the West Chester pike. The old Hunter estate has been purchased as a summer vacation home for children by women of St. Martha's Social Center, Eighth Street and Snyder Avenue, interested in charitable work.

THE OLD HUNTER estate at Broomall, just opened as a summer vacation home under the auspices of the Delta Kappa Psi Fraternity, contains many cherry, apple and fruit trees—an ideal outing spot for youngsters.

AN UNUSUAL view of shell-shattered Rheims Cathedral photographed from one of the towers.

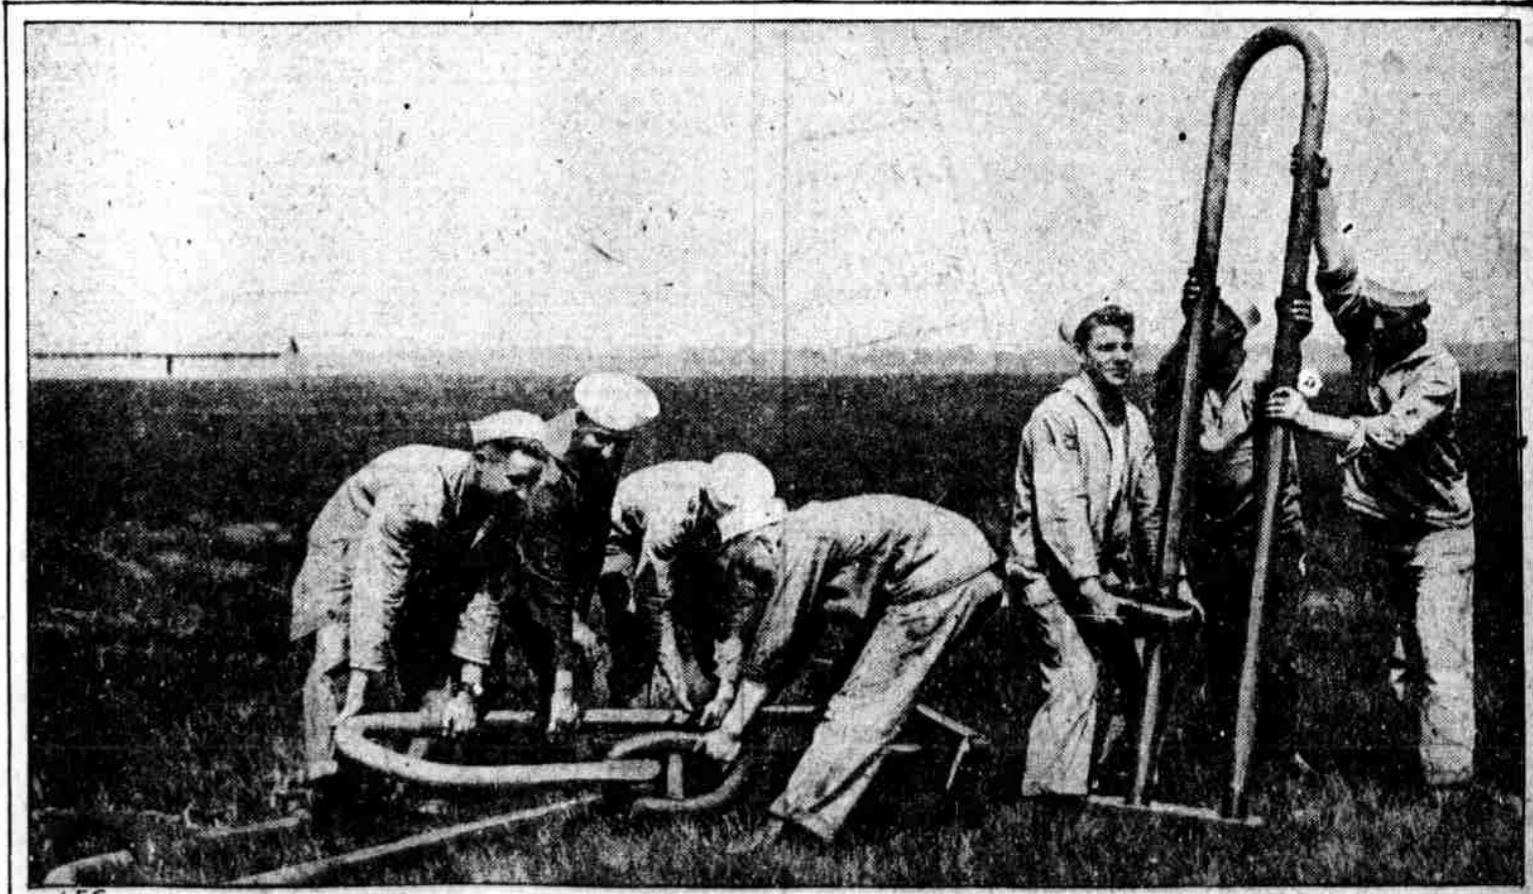

COSTUME seen at the opening of the Longchamps track near Paris. The meet was the first held since the war and the mannikins were out in force wearing the newest modes.

THE ARCHITECTURE of most city newsstands is of the haphazard period. This little kiosk, a la Paris, is on Arch Street above Sixteenth.

POLLY PUTS the kettle on in the morning in a blue linen frock, trimly made, with its loose blouse

SAILORS OF the Rockaway Naval Air Station at work at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, L. I., preparing for the arrival of the British transatlantic dirigible R-34, which is expected to fly from England next week. The sailors are shown handling the huge steel anchor staples that will hold the giant balloon in place. The pins are to be sunk in concrete blocks.