BRAVES HOLD CELLAR STUDENTS FINISH AGAINST PHIL BIDS

Stallings Flatly Refuses to What May Happen Yield and Coombs Is Forced to Win Second Game and Even Break

KELLY SETS RECORD

By EDWIN J. POLLOCK
THE Braves flatly refused to yield the cellar to our Phils yesterday. They were ousted out of it in the first of a pair of nightmares at the Baker estate, but they came held transfer in the came held the came held transfer in the ca but they came back strong in the second spasm and lost the game, but won the cellar. With July 1 no longer somewhere in the distant future, cellars

Our Phils exhibited like regular tailenders in the first fright and won the coveted cellar by losing 10-6. The fielders managed to kick the ball around at critical moments and pull bones on the bases whenever it looked as if they might get some runs.

Eppa Rixey was just right to help the cause, yielding ten hits and eight runs. George Smith was permitted to indulge in the festivities and he did well, too, allowing six hits for a pair of markers. Ray Keating did his best to hold the Braves in the cellar, but when he started to wobble, Al Demarce was ordered in and Al, being a former Giant with first-place aspirations, spoiled Boston hopes by holding the Phils safe.

George Stallings used some great strategy to regain last position in the nightcap. He pulled Jim Thorpe out of the lineup because Injun Jim had three hits in the first game and when the Phils were in such a position that Cravath they couldn't help themselves, Northrup relieved Nehf, and scored a moral Boston win by forcing over the winning Phil counters. So the Coombsmen had a 9-5 victory thrust upon them.
