Both Mrs. Millhiser and the management are at a loss to explain the fact that approximately $225,000 worth of jewelry was left untouched in the safe deposit box.

The statement given out by the attorney of the hotel follows:
"On May 20 Mrs. Clarence Millhiser, of Richmond, Va., who with her late husband was a guest of the Biltmore, procured from the hotel one of the safe deposit boxes maintained for the convenience of guests desiring to store valuables. She alleges that she placed in this box on that date, the day of her husband's death, jewelry of considerable value and that when she went to the box on June 13 to remove the jewelry a part of the same was missing."

VICTIM OF $275,000 GEM THEFT
A FORMER PHILADELPHIAN

Mrs. Regina Millhiser, Ellis Gimbel's Niece, Charges Jewels Disappeared From Lock Box in Biltmore Hotel

Mrs. Regina Millhiser, who says that jewels valued at $275,000 mysteriously disappeared in New York, was formerly Miss Regina Viola Greenwald, of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia police are co-operating with New York police in an effort to locate the stolen jewels.

Mrs. Millhiser charges she placed the jewels in her safe deposit box in the Biltmore Hotel and that the gems disappeared from the box. In a short statement telling of the missing jewels, the attorney for the hotel do not concede this fact, protecting their client under the phrase that Mrs. Millhiser alleges that she placed jewelry of considerable value in the box.

Niece of Ellis Gimbel
Mrs. Millhiser, who is a niece of Ellis Gimbel and who was born and educated in this city, living here until the time of her marriage to Clarence Millhiser, the millionaire mill owner and financier of Richmond, Va., has placed the matter in the hands of her lawyer, the late Mr. Gimbel's attorney, to prosecute the case until the hotel authorities have had every opportunity to produce the jewels.

Mrs. Millhiser says she placed the jewels, along with others valued at $500, in all, in the safe deposit box on May 20, the day of her husband's death in a New York hospital. She claimed the contents of her box on June 13. When the clerk handed her the box she opened it. Two packages, apparently the same ones she placed in the box, were there. She examined them, however, and then announced that jewels valued at at least $275,000 were gone.

The hotel management was notified immediately, and although they did not concede that the jewels were stolen from the box, the New York police department, the hotel detective force and other agencies are at work on the case, as well as the detective bureaus in other cities in the East.

The system at the hotel is such, the management claims, that it would be impossible for any one but Mrs. Millhiser to obtain the safe deposit box in the hotel lobby, behind the cashier's cage. Two keys are kept for each box. One is retained by the cashier and one by the person taking the box. Neither can open the box without the other key.

Visited at Biltmore
Mrs. Millhiser is a strikingly handsome and impressive woman, the hotel manager says, and is well known about the Biltmore, where she and her family have been frequent visitors for four years. This fact would prohibit the possibility of any one but Mrs. Millhiser obtaining her key and thus securing the jewels, it is claimed, as the person opening one of the safe deposit boxes must first be identified before the box is handed over, and the two keys are fitted to the lock.

It was suggested to Mrs. Millhiser at the time she reported the disappearance that she might possibly have made an error in her inventory and that the jewels she supposed were lost might have been placed in another place. She denied this possibility.

Both Mrs. Millhiser and the management are at a loss to explain the fact that approximately $225,000 worth of jewelry was left untouched in the safe deposit box.

The statement given out by the attorney of the hotel follows:
"On May 20 Mrs. Clarence Millhiser, of Richmond, Va., who with her late husband was a guest of the Biltmore, procured from the hotel one of the safe deposit boxes maintained for the convenience of guests desiring to store valuables. Wife as Executrix
Clarence Millhiser's will, executed on February 6, was filed for probate in the New York surrogate's office yesterday. He made his wife executrix with out bond and asked that there be no appraisal. He left $10,000 to Edgar Leigh Lambeth, of 169 West Eighty-first street, "if he be living and in my employ at the time of my death." The Legislators recall, however, that Senator Woodward himself suggested that the charter bill be sent to the health and sanitation committee of the Senate, because one of the "evils" it was supposed to curb in Philadelphia was the dust menace.

Representative Gans, a Pennrose legislator from Philadelphia, is chairman of the House committee which has charge of the bill. It has been read twice. Mr. Gans said this afternoon he had tried to report the bill out yesterday, but there was not a quorum at the meeting of the committee. He said he would make another effort. There is a report around the House that the purchasing agent bill is slated to die whether it stays in or comes out of committee.

HOUSE BILLS PASSED TODAY
$250,000 Appropriated for Port of Philadelphia
Harrisburg, June 25.—The Senate bill amending third-class city registration laws so that no one may register after the third day was thrown into a conference committee when the House met today.

The last of the appropriation bills passed.
Bills passed finally included:
Giving board of Public Grounds and Buildings authority to acquire property.
Providing means of collecting municipal debts as against owners of property.
Insuring it unlawful for any insurance or surety company to do a life insurance company to transact business except through authorized fourth-class school districts to purchase or build residences for principals, teachers or other employees of the school, as well as law students and to practice medicine.

Colonel Clay Jubilant
"Passage of this additional appropriation means a great relief to us," said Colonel Clay this afternoon. "It will enable us to keep together our old organization which we had before American entered the war."

"We are laying off men, but these we would lay off anyhow in our change from a war to a peace basis. We will be able to keep about 750 men at work in the tool, loading and bullet-assembling shops of the small arms ammunition department, so that we can go ahead with our manufacture for another year and keep our force intact—an important factor in our work."

"I am not arguing for a big force such as we had during the war. We are passing to a peace basis, and many of these men can be used on new types of ammunition. At any rate, we will not find them scattered if we were to be caught short of ammunition again."

"I haven't been notified officially of the Senate's action, but I am glad that we are now able to go ahead with our old organization."
"There is a settlement of working men and women residing at Frankford whose fathers and grandfathers worked there before them and who have acquired their own homes. They are an institution. During this war it was from the Frankford Arsenal that the trained and skilled mechanics were sent into the munitions factories of the country that enabled us to turn out the enormous amount of ammunition which was sent abroad to carry on the war."

90 Per Cent American-Born
"We were told in the committee that the $200,000 recommended by the House was upon the theory that these men should be dismissed, that that nucleus should be broken up, and that nucleus of fine mechanics upon which the country can draw in the future should be dispersed. The testimony before the committee showed that 60 per cent of these people were American-born citizens, and that the great majority of them own their own homes."

"I think that we all recognize that these great institutions and instrumentalities of war are not profit-making concerns. We build battleships that never engage in naval conflict; we build great guns that never fire a shot at an enemy; we manufacture powder that deteriorates and is never utilized. This institution, like every other worthy, well-established institution, is supported by American mechanics who are constituted a college of technical men and technical women, and ought to be maintained."
"The War Department, as I have stated estimated for more than $3,000,000. We are not asking that this institution should be maintained at its full capacity, where it can employ some 2,500 men. We have put this at $1,600,000, which was the peace basis upon which it stood before war was declared. I hope the amendment of the committee will prevail."
The amendment was adopted. It is expected the House will agree to the Senate amendment when the bill goes to conference tomorrow.

themselves to take any considerable step in resuming Germany's offensive attitude.

The German admiral who sunk the ships may be shot. Germany may be compelled to send a full delegation to Versailles and take part in the solemn ceremony of peace there, but the Allies are likely to blink at the fact that Germany has notified the world that the treaty is only another "scrap of paper," and has given striking illustrations of her attitude toward such obligations.

There is no question that Germany has the power to resist the reparations provisions of the treaty. The Allies are weak by reason of the fact that they themselves have confessed the impracticability of some sections of the treaty and offered in a recent note to Germany practically to negotiate the whole subject during the next few months.

Germany's tactics now are to exert the utmost pressure upon the Allies and public opinion throughout the world in the hope of a great modification of the reparations terms in the negotiations of the next few months.

increased appropriation, said Frankford Arsenal was one of the oldest instrumentalities of our national defense and was the nucleus from which all the other arsenals in the country have sprung.

"The War Department asked $3,000,000 for this item and the Senate bill of last spring, which did not pass, called for $2,000,000," said Senator Knox.

"The Frankford Arsenal is one of the oldest instrumentalities of this country. It is one of the oldest establishments of our national defense. It was founded more than 100 years ago and has been the nucleus from which all the arsenals of the country, both permanent and temporary, have sprung."

New Girl Asks $5000 to Patch Up a Broken Heart

Tillie Rosner, 2922 Ridge avenue, has brought suit against Herman Shapiro, 547 North Sixth street, to recover $5000 damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage. Judge Monaghan, of Court No. 5, allowed a capias for the arrest of the defendant, fixing his bail at $500.

The couple first met in August last at Atlantic City, where they were guests at the same hotel. The plaintiff believed it to be "love at first sight," as Shapiro, she said, immediately began paying her marked attentions. He lost little time in "professing his love," and on January 10 of this year, said Miss Rosner, formal announcement of their engagement was made.

The action of certain members of Council in defeating the passage of this bill was strongly condemned as being against the best interests of the city and favoring strong of factional politics.

A resolution was passed endorsing the loan bill in its original form and urging the councilmen of the Kensington district to continue to use every effort to secure its passage.

Francis F. Burch, president of the Independent Councilman's Association, and representative of the Forty-sixth Ward in Council, announced early this afternoon the names of the men who would meet Chairman Joseph P. Gaffney, of the finance committee, in conference on the Municipal Loan.

The meeting will be held this afternoon in Room 500, City Hall.

Attack on Germans Far-Fetched
The military government of Paris has ordered the commencement of legal proceedings against persons whose names at present are not known in connection with Belgium in reparations through the substitution of German bonds for the Belgian obligations, the four great powers to take over the German bonds, subject to the approval of their respective legislative bodies.

The Temps says an administrative investigation has established that the affair was greatly exaggerated, that the names of the men who were brought the first demonstrations by the crowd, and that it is doubtful if stones were thrown at their carriages. It adds that it is certain no obstacles were placed in the road leading to the railway station.
