Head of Insane Hospital Says It Is Old Custom to Allow Patients Leave From Institution

JUDGE MARTIN APPROVES

Surprise at the attitude of the New York authorities, who are trying to renew the fight for the extradition of Harry K. Thaw, and who have protested against his visit to his home in Pittsburgh, was expressed today by Dr. D. H. Fuller, head of the men's department of the Philadelphia Hospital for the Insane, where Thaw is confined.

"I certainly was surprised when I saw in the paper this morning that District Attorney Swann, of New York, was trying to renew the fight for the extradition of Mr. Thaw," he said.

SCHOOLS GAIN, CITY LOSES, IN BANKING

Municipal Research Bureau Head Points Out Flaws in Unequal System

GET 2 1/2 INTEREST, NOT 4 1/2

The holding of a large cash balance by the city and of a small balance by the Board of Education is the situation that exists today, although City Controller Walton is also controller of the school funds.

The city treasurer's report, issued Thursday, showed the city had a cash balance, not including the sinking fund account, of more than $11,000,000.

The school fund balance on June 25 was slightly more than $100,000, held in two banks, with an inactive balance of $25,000 distributed among five banks and trust companies.

"Although what might be called the school board's annual turnover is about one-fifth that of the city's, the school board's average balance is far below the city's," said Frederick Greenberg, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research.

200 CHILDREN ON OUTING

Poor Girls Sent to Port Kennedy in Special Coaches

More than 200 little girls from poor families in the city were sent today to the summer home of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, Port Kennedy, Pa.

This is the first of ten outings which the society had planned for the summer months.

Usually more than 2000 children are entertained every summer at the country week headquarters at Port Kennedy. The home is under the care of the Missionary Sisters of St. Francis, who during the year teach several Italian parish schools in the city.

Mrs. Mary R. Deane, of Reading, Pa., a Protestant, offered as a gift to the late Archbishop Ryan the farm at Port Kennedy, on which she and her late husband lived many years, to be used as a summer home for children cared for by the Society of St. Vincent de Paul. These special buildings have been erected on the grounds for the accommodation of 250 children. The place is located close to Valley Forge.

PLAN COURT TEST OF SEDITION LAW

Effort Will Be Made to Get Action on Constitutionality of Measure

Opponents of the anti-sedition act, signed yesterday by Governor Spruill, plan to test its constitutionality in court.

If Mr. Spruill and Attorney General Schaffer consent, a test case will be arranged by agreement of all parties.

James H. Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor, who announced recently that organized labor would fight the constitutionality of the bill in the courts, said today that efforts would be made to bring about a test case.

Dr. William I. Hull, of Swarthmore, indorses the idea of a test suit.

"It ought to be done as speedily as possible," said Doctor Hull. "I don't think the court would uphold the constitutionality of the anti-sedition law."

"I intend to see the attorney general next week," said Mr. Maurer, "and ask him if it is possible to arrange an agreement by which John Doe proceedings can be instituted to test the act in the Dauphin County Court."

"I think that would be the only fair way. I would hate to see some one deliberately violate the provisions of the act for the purpose of testing it, and run the chance of a twenty years' prison sentence."

Mr. Maurer said he had been informed by some of the best constitutional lawyers in the state that the "law would not stand the court test."

"We will have some good backing when we go into court," Mr. Maurer added.
