

FRANCE TO FOLLOW PHILA. HOUSING PLAN

M. Greber, Head of Commission Now Here, Says Examples Here Are Excellent

PAUL CRET ON BOARD

The housing projects in Philadelphia and the surrounding territory will be used as examples and types for the reconstruction work in France during the next few years, according to M. Jacques Greber, head of the commission of the French Ministry of Reconstruction, which is in this city for a three days' stay.

Yorkship village, Hog Island and the Chester yards offer excellent examples of building operations which were carried on with a great scarcity of labor and in a very short time. These are two of the same difficulties which those interested in reconstruction work in France are facing," said M. Greber. The commission was formed as a result of a report made by M. Greber to the French government on the subject of methods and materials which might be used in reconstruction. It came to this country to study the labor-saving devices which, according to M. Greber, we have perfected. Building is their sole interest and insistence was laid on the fact that this was not a business or financial affair.

"We believe that some sort of rigid investigation and study such as this should be made before manufacturers invest their capital," declared M. Greber. "Reconstruction work in France has nearly reached the end of its first stage, which is the settlement of bills of damages," he continues. "The reconstruction must look into the legality and justice of all private claims; then the government will settle these damages with the money of Germany. These steps must be undertaken before the rest of reconstruction work can be carried to a successful conclusion."

The commission is composed, besides M. Greber, of Paul Cret, professor of architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, who is assisting M. Greber, having recently returned from service in France; Pierre Nague, an engineer of Chalons-sur-Saone; Victor Perreand, another engineer; Charles Jacob, ceramist, of Paris, and Rene Bonhomme, a contractor, also of Paris. Charles Whitaker is the secretary of the commission during its stay here.

Mr. Greber is well known in this country, having spent ten years here. He is also well known in this city as the designer of the Parkway plan. He has designed some of the most beautiful gardens on the Widener and Stotesbury estates.

The commission will only remain here for three days, and has no set program for its stay. It will return to France about the middle of July. It is making its headquarters at the Ritz-Carlton.

ALLEGED THIEF IS ACCUSER

Charges Complainant With Assault and Battery

After seeing the man he had arrested for attempting to rob his store held in $3000 bail for court by Recorder Stackhouse, Camden, this morning, Isaac Benus, 1039 Louis street, found himself charged by the alleged thief with "atrocious assault and battery."

Benus keeps a grocery store at 1039 Louis street, and a few nights ago it was robbed of more than half of its stock of canned goods. Benus did not fix the lock but hid himself in the store on the following night to see if the thieves would return for more.

A hand appeared around the edge of the door and Benus snatched up a cleaver from the counter and brought it down across the top of the head. The hand belonged to Edward Belecko, nineteen years old, Twelfth and Mt. Vernon streets, Camden. He made a charge of assault and battery against Benus before his own hearing this morning.

Belecko will probably lose his hand as the result of his injury.

GIRL SAVED FROM DROWNING

New Guard at National Park Makes Rescue—To Get Medal

The new life-saving corps, which is a branch of the United States Volunteer Life-Saving Corps, at National Park, N. J., had its first rescue last evening. A young woman from Philadelphia was saved from drowning in the Delaware river.

The honors go to Herbert Sanders, a machinist at the Philadelphia navy yard. He and the other life guards, all of whom live here, were on duty all day, and were anxious that some one would give them an opportunity to show their ability. When the cry for help was heard all the guards rushed for the water, but Sanders proved the best swimmer and it was not long before he had the girl in his arms and was bearing her to shore. She was soon revived and she went to her home without giving her name.

Sanders will be given a medal for his work.

Smith's left arm was fractured together with a probable fracture of the skull. McGrath suffered severe bruises of the body. Both were taken to the Episcopal Hospital.

STRIKE DEMANDS REFUSED

Pusey & Jones Riveters Are Turned Down by Shipping Board

The United States shipping board announced to the riveting gangs at the Pusey & Jones shipyards, Gloucester, today that their demand for an increase in wages had been refused.

Those riveters engaged in plate shell work demanded a wage of five and one-quarter cents a rivet, an increase of one and one-quarter cents over their previous pay. Twenty-five gangs are said to have quit. An equal number decided to stick, it was reported but threatened only to await for the board's decision.

At the company's offices today it was denied there had been any serious upset in production.

TRAGEDY MARKS END OF CHINATOWN'S LIFE

One Died of Drug Overdose and 100 Arrests Made in the District

DAD'S NOW IN MOURNING

Tragedy attended the celebration of the passing of old intoxicating drinks in the Chinatown district last night, and more than 100 arrests were made in these two districts.

Robert Kartler (or Knapp) was found dead in a third story room of a rooming house at 1025 Spring Garden street early today. An overdose of drug was given as the cause of his death. Joseph Gillespie, who lives in the house, told the police that the man had been drinking heavily all day and was probably partially out of his mind with liquor.

In Chinatown, fireworks and emotion were both prevalent to show the sorrow of the people at the passing of King Alcohol. Ever the first time, even the stolid Oriental showed his emotion very plainly.

Up at Dad's theatrical hotel, Seventh and Race streets, the celebration was a mingling of the gay and the sad. All the decorations were black and members of burlesque and theatrical troupes in the city were all dressed in mourning. The orchestra played Chopin's Funeral March at the stroke of 12.

Dad sold 2 1/2 per cent beer until 2 o'clock, when he closed his place, saying it was a good day's work. Around the corner, and police from the Eleventh and Winter streets station had to respond several times to separate the "wets" and the "drys." Riot calls came from all over the city.

HELD AS WIFE-BEATER

Woman, in Hospital, Says Husband Attacked With Poker

Joseph Borner, fifty-four years old, of 3298 Emory street, was held in $800 bail for court today on the charge of assault and battery upon his wife, Eve Borner, Magistrate Costello, of the Front and Westmoreland streets station, heard the complaint.

The wife claimed that Borner came home about 1 o'clock last night under the influence of intoxicants and started an argument which ended in his beating her with a poker. The woman was sent to the Northeast Hospital.

Charm of line and color and distinctiveness of style feature the excellent collection which we have assembled here for women of fashion.
