

HOUSEWIVES FEAR COLD STORAGE ACT

Will Increase Food Prices, Says Head of League, Confessing to Doubt

PRODUCE MEN DENY RISE

A mixed chorus of condemnation and praise today greeted the new cold storage act, which was signed yesterday by Governor Sprout to supersede the act of 1913, regulating the operation of cold storage warehouses.

Housewives believe the law will increase the price of food, according to Mrs. William B. Derr, president of the local branch of the Housewives' League, while producers contend that it will result in exactly the opposite, according to John S. Morris, president of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange. Director of Supplies MacLaughlin was neutral, saying that he was not sufficiently familiar with the provisions of the act to express an opinion.

The new law, by extending the time limit for food storage, will encourage speculators to withhold food from the market and tend to increase the prices, said Mrs. Derr, who was prominent in opposing the passage of the act in the Legislature. "I still believe it will tend to increase prices. I wish some one could convince me otherwise."

"A decrease in prices will be encouraged by the act," said Mr. Morris, who supported the measure. "Its principal feature, extension of the time limit for storage on a season-to-season basis, will assure a sufficient supply of food here at all times. Philadelphia is short of cold storage facilities, and the law will help the industry to expand."

The new law establishes a twelve months' cold storage limit for food of all kinds. The old law had various periods for meats, eggs, butter and other foods. Quarterly reports and a $50 license fee are required. Prohibition of the storage or sale of unwholesome food is contained in the act, as well as requirement that every open container or wrapper of foods in cold storage must be re-marked "cold storage goods."

The Governor also approved the bill providing that second-class cities shall have five assessors and an additional one for each 75,000 inhabitants over 200,000.

Another bill signed amends the schools code so that all fourth-class districts shall include the examination of the teeth of pupils as well as sight, hearing and other physical defects.

MRS. BLANKENBURG TO TALK
Widow of Former Mayor Will Address Commercial Body

Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg has been invited to address the Woman's Association of Commerce of the United States on industrial art at the convention of that body in St. Louis, July 15. This association is composed of the leading women of the country, formed for the purpose of advancing the educational and civic interests of women wage-earners and to aid the movement of women of recognized ability in special lines of endeavor.

Mrs. Blankenburg, well known in Philadelphia on account of her connection with many organizations of a civic and educational nature, is the president of the association committee of women of the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art.

Four Given City Positions

Burbridge, 7028 Hagerman street, chemist with the bureau of surveys, salary $1800; Fred Johnson, 6940 Dittman street; Florence Goulding, 2303 West Turner street, and John Hirt, 883 North Twenty-fourth street, assistant teachers with the Board of Recreation, salary $900.

CHEERFUL LITTLE INVALIDS ON HOSPITAL'S ROOF IN SUMMER TIME

LITTLE SOJOURNERS OF THE HOSPITAL ROOF GARDEN.....

And So They Were Married

The two women looked at the living room and their conversation ran something like this, although it was conducted in an undertone.

Said the older woman, "Of course you must make allowances. Your own furniture will look so different."

"I know that," said the girl in a self-satisfied way, "but the rooms are very small."

"The dining room isn't so bad."

"But my furniture won't show up in it, all my lovely mahogany. This furniture fits in with the rest of the apartment," and then the girl flung a hasty glance over her shoulder and lowered her voice as she said something else.

Ruth's cheeks burned, but there was nothing she could do.

"The bath is very small," said the girl who was exploring, "and the closet room is abominable."

"The kitchen is splendid, though, Belle, come and see," called the older woman, who was evidently the mother.

"Oh, the kitchen. I'd rather have the kitchen small and the living room a decent size. The way they build these cheap apartments these days is simply a crime."

The girl had paused before the closed door of the bedroom and now looked at Ruth inquiringly.

"Is it all right for me to go in here?" she queried.

Ruth interposed, with "Just a moment," and opened the door to see if Alice had made any effort to dress. She had thrown on some clothes in a half dejected way and Ruth saw that she had been crying again. That morning's mail had not brought any letter from Bert.

The two strangers looked at Alice curiously as they pushed into the bedroom, and she walked past them into the living room where Ruth joined her. Ruth was inordinately annoyed at Alice. It seemed as if she would go mad if she couldn't put an end to long faces and tears and the utter sordidness of a monotonous existence.

Alice looked up at her and saw something of what was going on in Ruth's mind.

"You're disgusted with me, aren't you?" she said.

"I do think you are giving way to yourself horribly, Alice. You used to

TRYING TO GET A GLIMPSE OF THE STREET LIFE FAR BELOW... High above the city streets the youngsters in Jefferson Hospital while away the hot summer day on the roof of the institution with games and toys rave some spirit; now you haven't any."

"I'd just like to see what you would do if you were placed in my position," Alice defended.

"Perhaps I wouldn't do any differently," said Ruth wearily. Her head ached, and she felt mentally disgusted with everything. She was sick with everything, nothing ever went right. If only Alice would decide to do something one way or another and would leave her alone to think matters out, it might help.

The two women were coming back now. They stopped in the doorway of the living room and gave a last casual glance around. Ruth had to exert an effort to keep from slamming the door as she saw them out.

These were the kind of people she belonged with, and the irony of it was that even they could afford to pay more to live than she and Scott could. The girl, cheaply pretty in obvious clothes put on with an eye to present-day modes. The mother so plainly eager to play the grande dame role when one could see with a half a glance that she was not used to it.

When Ruth came back to the living room again, Alice looked up at her determinedly. "You say that I ought not to have spirit, Ruth," she said suddenly.

"What would you advise me to do?" Ruth's patience broke. "I don't know," she retorted, "that's just it; I don't know what to tell you to do. But I do know one thing and that is you will never get Bert back by sitting around here weeping and moping day after day."

"If only mother and father were here."

"Then you'd go over there and do the same thing, I suppose."

"But what can I do? I've written to him, and he doesn't answer. There's just one thing for me to believe and that is that he doesn't want me any longer."

"If you really believe that, Alice, there's only one thing for you to do."

"What's that?"

Jim says he hopes he won't ever have to live in a boarding house, because since I've been using AI Sauce he doesn't know what it means to eat commonplace hash or stew. And I don't throw away my left-over steak either—oh, dear no! I cut it in pieces for serving, and when I've got it slightly heated I pour over it a mixture of a quarter of a pound of melted butter substitute and two tablespoons of AI Sauce.

It makes a splendid sauce, too, for freshly broiled steak or fish. Jim says he knows I don't mind his bringing company home unexpectedly, even on Monday night. That AI Sauce certainly does make "hot back" taste like the Waldorf-Astoria—AdV.

HIGH ABOVE CITY, KIDDIES IN HOSPITAL ESCAPE HEAT

Little Cripples Smile and Laugh Despite Trouble—One Eats Ice Cream Through Tube—Tastes With Stomach

JUST think of tasting ice cream with your stomach!

Little two-year-old Alice has been fed through her stomach for more than a year, and you can't fool her. She knows the difference between ice cream and just ordinary food, and her eyes sparkle when she sees the good things to eat.

Alice and her doll with a broken nose both live at the Jefferson Hospital with a lot of other youngsters who have ailments with long names.

"What's wrong with you?" a big boy who was sitting in a wheel chair doing circus stunts on the roof, was asked.

"Toothache," came as quick as a flash from Martin, whose trouble is more serious than that.

Only an Abscess, Smiles Bill "Mine's an abscess on the chest," spoke up Billy, who gives the impression that abscesses are a real joy. Billy has a smile that can be seen a block away and a disposition that is like sunshine on a rainy day.

One little fellow breathes through an apparatus on his throat. You can hold his nose and mouth shut and he breathes just the same. He thought at first that he would not smile—in fact, he told us that he was not going to smile—but he couldn't resist the good time that the others were having on the roof and began to talk.

"Where do you come from, William?"

"Tampa," answered the boy, with a little aspirant sound that goes with his talking.

"I shouldn't be surprised," said the doctor. "They come from every possible place. This fellow's been here just about a week." Then the doctor showed how little William can talk when he breathes through his nose and how he talks when he breathes through the new apparatus he is wearing.

Frances had a broken upper leg, which is getting along in fine style, but for some reason we never got a glimpse of her face. She was too shy to take down her hands and her eyes, and tonight could not make her smile for a picture.

One two-year-old boy was walking around in his bare feet and with some assistance and a little encouragement was induced to answer questions. His little screwed-up face gave way to a good-natured squint which showed at once that his trouble was eyes, but that he wasn't letting his eyes interfere with his good time.

You might wonder what children do who are sick enough to be in a hospital in hot summer weather. They play games and have toys that people send to them and sometimes they get treated to ice cream.

Dodge Heat, at Least When it is 100 degrees in the shade they stay indoors, where it is at least twenty degrees cooler.

"What do we do for them in hot weather?" said the doctor. "Well, you see, it is so much cooler here than it is on the street that the hot weather doesn't trouble them particularly. And then we give them baths several times a day."

There's a big girl who also has a "toothache" which has kept her at the hospital for almost eleven months, but she has a good time with the rest of them.

Not everybody on the top floor comes for a long visit. David is there for tonsils, so he won't be staying very long. David is a tall and lank boy with a very, very dark complexion.

The wards are full of children with bandages and some with pale faces and big eyes. Others have ruddy cheeks and lusty lungs. All colors and nationalities live in the wards.

Sammy is a colored chap who had trouble with his eyes and is wearing dark glasses, but you ought to see him shimmy! He probably never takes an unorthodox step. Dance was just born in him.

NOT WORRIED BY HIS AILMENT...

"Show him that you don't want him either."

There was a silence, and then quite suddenly Alice burst into a storm of tears. "But how?" she sobbed stormily, "what can I do when I haven't any money?"

(Tomorrow, the long expected letter arrives.)

50c Molds Free

Get a Full Set if You Use Jiffy-Jell

Pint Mold—Style—D For a Jiffy-Jell Salad or Meat Loaf Individual Molds A Set of Six for Jiffy-Jell Real-Fruit Desserts

Jiffy-Jell is for salads as well as for desserts. And we offer this 50-cent aluminum mold for use in making salads.

Use Lime Jiffy-Jell for salads. Each package contains a bottle of lime-fruit essence, sealed. Added to Jiffy-Jell it makes a tart, green salad jell.

Some serve it with the salad as a zesty garnish. Some mix the salad into the jell while cooling. With cooked or uncooked vegetables this makes a salad loaf.

A meat loaf is made by mixing in meat scraps. This gives you meat in aspic—an ideal summer cold dish.

We Supply the Mold

Pint Mold, Style D, serves a full package of Lime Jiffy-Jell with the salad or meat mixed in. It makes a flat loaf with six indentations to mark six individual servings.

Send us five end labels from Jiffy-Jell packages—the end labels naming the flavor—and we'll send you this aluminum mold.

Mint Jiffy-Jell contains a vial of mint. It makes a garnish jell, far better than mint sauce, to serve with cold meats or roast lamb.

All Flavors in Liquid Form in Glass

This is a 60-cent gift. These aluminum molds come in sets of six, assorted styles, valued at 10 cents each.

Send us five end labels from Jiffy-Jell packages—the end labels naming the flavor—and we will send the entire set.

Loganberry and Pineapple are two dessert flavors which we particularly want you to try. They are flavors which must be sealed to keep. So they were impossible in old-style gelatine desserts.

In Jiffy-Jell the fruit-juice essence comes in liquid form, in vials. So with all fruit flavors. There is a wealth of the real-fruit flavor, condensed from the fruit itself.

Include Loganberry, Pineapple, Lime and Mint in your purchase of Jiffy-Jell. Learn the delights of these liquid flavors. They have won millions of housewives to Jiffy-Jell.

Pint Dessert Molds Free

At the bottom we picture two aluminum pint molds. Each serves a full package of Jiffy-Jell. They are valued at 50 cents each.

Send us five end labels from Jiffy-Jell packages—the end labels naming the flavor—and we will send either mold you want. Or, if you prefer, send a grocer's sales slip showing a 5-package purchase.

Send them to us with the coupon below, stating the molds you want. Cut out the entire offer so you won't forget.
