

And So They Were Married

SCOTT answered the telephone, but he apparently did not know who was calling.
"Who is it?" he kept saying. "What name—Cranford? Oh, yes, Miss Cranford."
There was silence while he apparently listened to something across the wire. Suddenly his face lighted up.
"Yes, I see. Well, if you will tell her husband is here, perhaps she will be willing to see reason. Ask her to come to the telephone, will you?"
Scott turned to the others who had left the table and were hanging around the telephone.
"It's about Alice?" asked Bert eagerly.
"Yes, she's at the house of this girl, some Alice knew at boarding school, a Miss Cranford. Yes," turning back to the telephone, "is this you, Alice?"
A muffled voice spoke to Scott across the wire, muffled as though the woman behind it had been crying, but eager with the news that Miss Cranford had evidently just imported.
"Is Bert really there?"
"He certainly is," Scott was angry. "You'd better come right home."
"Tell Bert to come for me."
"I hope you're satisfied, acting like a baby and frightening every one to death?" Scott was not provoked to realize what Alice had been through. He saw only one side of it and the way Alice had treated Ruth and himself.
Bert would wait for nothing, not even his dessert which Ruth begged him to finish. And Ruth, when Scott stood at the top of the stairs hearing him run down at break-neck speed on his way to Alice.
"Bert's all right," remarked Scott as they turned to go in.
"He's a darling," said Ruth impulsively, "and I'm so glad it's all over."
"I hope it will be a lesson to her to curb her temper," said Scott with brotherly frankness, "but it won't; perhaps it may for a time, but Alice will break out again. Bert shouldn't have come for her, he shouldn't have shown himself so eager to get her back. Alice should have suffered more."
But Ruth, who remembered Alice's suffering, could not stand this. "I suppose," she burst out, "you would have been perfectly willing to have had Bert untrue to Alice. You men stick to getting on matters like that, I believe."
It was on silly matters like this that Ruth and Scott kept up the friction between them. It seemed almost as if Ruth took a certain delight in disagreeing with Scott, and there was nearly always a coyness of some kind between them. Just as soon as they agreed on any matter as they had this afternoon on Scott's suggestion that they look downtown for an apartment, something else intervened and wiped out entirely their oneness of thought.
Bert and Alice did not come in until the next day, and then it was for just a minute, for Bert had to get back to his business. The two girls had a few minutes alone while Ruth was helping Alice to get her things packed up, and Ruth took the opportunity of asking Alice about everything.
"Are you happy?" was her first question. She wanted to add, "Are you glad that you can't treat Bert like that and get away with it?" But she didn't.
Alice was radiant, she did not seem like the same girl at all. She talked almost incessantly, but finally there was a break.
"Do you know," she began slowly, "I don't believe that Bert has been true to me."
Ruth was horrified. "Alice, how can you say that, what do you mean?"

Adventures With a Purse

YOU probably have seen bureau scarves with scalloped edges embroidered in colors. But you will recall that generally the scallops have been anywhere from 1/8 to 1/4 of an inch deep. The scarves I saw today of linen finish are embroidered with deep blue scallops. But the scallops are scarcely one-sixteenth of an inch in depth. This gives a most unusual and dainty finish. And of course these covers could be used on the buffet or serving table just as well as on the bureau or dresser.
You will like the chains of clear golden topaz, varying in price from $3.50 to $4.50. Some have queer, quaint pendants, others have skillfully wrought gold beads among the topaz. And the gold of the beads and the amber of the topaz are indeed lovely together. I am sure that you will be delighted with one of these chains.
Some one has said that a checkerboard pattern is to designing what the trill is to music. I was reminded of this when I saw the attractive novelty handkerchiefs for twenty-five cents. The background is lavender, or green, or pink, or blue, and then running through the color are white lines which form a checked design. And in each of the corners is a little checkerboard design in the color of the handkerchiefs. One cannot have too many "hankies," particularly in summer.

600 Fresh, New Summer Frocks Priced 1/3 Less Than Usual

They are like a refreshing breeze at this time when most stocks are old and mussed.

$8.25 and $10

At $8.25

Included are pretty checked voile frocks in light blue, rose, lavender, navy blue and black with round pleated collars and cuffs. There are all sizes from 14 to 42. One is sketched.

Bright, Cheery Frocks at $10

There are checked voiles, pin-checked organdies, dainty dimities, etc. Plain-color organdie frocks in light blue, maize, tan white, Copenhagen, flesh and rose are lovely. Net collars and cuffs, broad sashes, crocheted buttons, and other bits of daintiness do much to individualize each frock. One from this group is sketched.

Figured Voile Frocks Special at $4.50

You will be surprised how nice they are. The voile is figured all over in rose, blue or tan tones. There are white organdie collars and cuffs. There is a choice of two models.

$7.50

$10

$8.25

$15

These Dresses From Our Own Stock

Plaid Gingham Frocks Reduced to $6

They have long overskirts on graceful lines. The collars and the cuffs are trimmed with white tucked organdie. These frocks are reduced because there are not all colors in each size.

A group of odd gingham and chintz frocks in individual models is greatly reduced because some of the dresses are slightly mussed. One frock from this group is sketched. Special $7.50.

A Group of Finer Frocks Reduced to $15

There are mostly two and three of a kind and sometimes only one, but the choosing is excellent. Flower-sprigged organdie, lovely plain-color organdie dresses, organdie frocks beaded in attractive motifs, satin-striped or plaid voile—all these are in this unusual group.

Several Other Groups

of Summer frocks are taken from our own stocks and reduced. These include frocks of plain or figured voile, striped gingham and organdie. $5, $6, $8.75 and $10.

A Whiff of Autumn

New things are appearing every day, and a large number of new models have just arrived. Black charmeuse in two models, and taupe, brown or navy blue charmeuse is graceful and dignified. The dresses would be appropriate for many formal occasions, and are not too heavy to wear now.

Navy blue serge touched with flame-red flannel creates a model that bespeaks Paris in designing. Tricotine promises to be better than ever and many women who are going North are eager for news of advance models. Georgette in many forms is also among these new things. Prices begin at $25.

Six Trim Summer Skirts

After all, white skirts are the old stand-by, for most women cannot get along during hot weather without a good supply of them.

The skirt, sketched, is an attractive style of smooth, white gabardine trimmed with tiny tucks and pearl buttons. $7.75.

A fine white tricotine skirt with vertical slash pockets is $4.75.

A self-striped Venetian with slot pockets is also $4.75.

White pique is snowy and pretty at $5.

In Extra Sizes

White rep with button-trimmed pockets is $4.75, in 32 to 46 inch waistbands. The pocket is so inset as to give a long, slim line.

Smooth white tricotine with slot pockets is $5, in 32 to 36 inch waistbands.

A Cool, Frilly Batiste Blouse, Special at $3.75

It is of soft white batiste with a frilly collar, a frill down the front and on the cuffs, all edged with pink or blue batiste.

Many Other Such Blouses are in a pleasant variety of styles from $2.25 to $7.50. They are collarless, quite plain, or trimmed with lace and frills.

Batiste launders so well that it is quite satisfactory for Summer blouses.

Dark Blue Crepe de Chine

makes a good blouse for traveling. It has a square-tucked collar, a tucked vest and cuffs and is $5.75.

"Why do you come of the sweet tooth family if I stop?" mother asked, looking at the five or six apples on the table and the dinner-to-night.
"I'm hungry," Susan declared.
"You are a little more than a little hungry," mother said, "where did you learn the trick?"
"I learned it from the girl who sold me these odd times to be hungry. She said not to eat cake and not to eat spicy little bits, but to eat the ginger-flavor ginger."
