dentation is to be determined under the new city charter and that, if they desired to vote in the September primary, they could appear before the commission on September 2 and 3.

Consultation is Held... Representative Leopold C. Glass, attorney for the Republican city committee, announced that he would have a number of men on hand who desired that their names be placed on the registry lists...

William J. Elliot, law partner of Thomas Reubner White, former of the charter bill, the reform leaders vigorously protested Mr. Glass's suggestion and said that, in view of the fact that this was the last day for persons to appear to have their names added, that it would be unlawful to present a blanket petition.

At this time Messrs. Woodruff, Fell and Quinn alone were sitting and they decided that the question would have to be decided by the entire board later in the day.

When the commissioners met they decided that the names would be taken and each case held under advisement. This was acceptable to Mr. Roach, who announced, however, that he would insist that he be permitted to scan the list and protest any names he might have evidence against.

George W. Coles, chairman of the Town Meeting party, filed application with the commission, asking recognition of the Town Meeting members in the appointment of division registrars.

Mr. Coles, in explaining his change of plan, said the Town Meeting adherents will make the fight at the primaries on the matter of independent action depending upon the result of the primaries.

Witness was called. He was a policeman in uniform, John McKernan, 1718 Ritter street, who formerly resided in the Thirty-fourth division of the Twenty-sixth ward.

Men from South Philadelphia... Reform leaders openly admitted that the Vares "had stolen a march on them."

Policeman is First Witness... Mr. Woodruff acted as master of ceremonies and was chairman by general consent of the registrars.
