

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Miss Josephine Widener Will Not Make Her Debut This Summer—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Neilson Give Private View of Movies at Wayne Theatre

SEVERAL people have told me that Miss Josephine Widener would come out this summer at Newport and here next winter, but they're "all wrong, Aloysius," she is not coming out. She's only seventeen anyhow, and besides has another year at school. She goes to Foxcroft, you know, and there she will be next season.

Fif's real name is Josephine, named after her father who is Joe Widener. Her mother was Miss Ella Pancoast, a daughter of the late Albert Pancoast and Mrs. Pancoast and a sister of Mrs. Benjamin B. Reath, of this city. Miss Widener has been married twice. Her first husband was Mr. Herberton. He was taken ill very shortly after their wedding trip and died when they had been married only a very few months. Some years after his death Mrs. Herberton married Mr. Widener. She is one of the most gracious of Philadelphia and is extremely popular here and in Europe, Palm Beach, New York, Newport and many other large cities and leading resorts. Fif has her mother's dark hair and gray-blue eyes.

TIME was when amateur theatricals were popular with the younger set, but goodness! they're not in it with movies. They are "absolutely" the latest. I was there on Monday night; there being the Wayne Moving Picture Theatre and seeing is believing, you know.

Under the patronage of Mrs. Lewis Neilson, the house was packed with as gala a throng of enthusiastic parents and fascinating offspring as ever graced an assemblage. Several reels were shown, the first being an Italian film which Lieutenant Colonel Robert Glendinning, of the aviation corps, had brought to America. It portrayed the king of Italy decorating Caproni, the great Italian aviator.

Then came the fun, for the other films were entirely localized talent. My dears, could you have seen some of our recent debutantes and even some of the 1920 crop registering Mary Pickford coyly or Theda Bara sauntering, you would have realized, as did I, that the coming generation is capable of more than "handing out a line."

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Neilson were shown welcoming guests in their garden at Coolock, their St. Davids home, and the sedate arrival of some former debutantes, such as Miss Gaius Baird, Miss Margaretta Jones, Miss Betty Tucker and Miss Elisabeth McMichael, was lightened later by the more frolicsome entrance of Miss Polly Thayer and Miss Ellen Glendinning.

But do not think that the fairer sex alone was represented—oh, dear, no, nothing of the kind, not at all; Billie Stroud, Barclay McPadden, Scott Lathrop, Harry Neilson, Charlie Myers, Fred Madeira, Frederick Drayton, Joe Ewing, Charlie Morgan and Clayton McMichael all made excellent movie heroes, believe me.

Representing the younger married set, I saw Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dale and Mrs. Crawford Madeira.

The film, "A Found out," was made under the direction of Charlie Morgan, who, with Harry Neilson and Clayton McMichael, worked up the technical details. Clayton McMichael showed the film for the first time at the May 30, when he and Harry Neilson gave a dinner and dance for Miss Martha McAllister and Sewell Berle, whose engagement was announced shortly before that time.

Altogether it was an enjoyable evening Monday. There was something fully exciting in seeing oneself in the movies and the audience was excited accordingly.

CAPE MAYITES are greatly distressed to have the wounded soldiers moved from there. They have been there for two years and every one down at the resort began to feel as if he had been decided to send them to other hospitals now and the motor messengers of Short Hills, N. J., and members of the National League for Women's Service have been moving the sick and wounded soldiers to the trains for the last few days.

They are being sent to Fort McHenry of Staten Island, rumor says. It will certainly be strange to walk on the boardwalk in Cape May and not meet men in wheeled chairs, men with bandaged arms and faces, men on crutches or wearing black glasses and being led by others. After the Cape Mayites get over feeling "sore" about it, they will probably breathe in relief in a way, for kindness to your heart might be, you could not help being depressed seeing those poor souls suffering.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown with veil and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Genevieve M. Glasgow, as maid of honor, who was attired in iridescent rose taffeta, embroidered in silver. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridegroom's brother, Captain Walter C. Cook, of the U. S. M. C., was best man.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. J. Melancthon Thayer, who was gowned in orchid taffeta with a lace overdress.

A small wedding breakfast was served in the Blue Room of the hotel immediately after the ceremony. After an extended honeymoon in the mountains of New England, Mr. and Mrs. Cook will be at home at 4829 Walnut street.

VISITING IN CAPE MAY

Association Celebrates When Ruling Scores One Point Against Realty Agent

Tenants in the vicinity of Twelfth and Porter streets celebrated an opinion rendered by the Superior Court quashing an appeal taken by a landlord against a tenant.

The meeting, which was held last night in Toner's Hall, Ninth and Jackson streets, was under the auspices of the Tenants' Protective Association. Michael Rouch, president, against whom proceedings were taken by William Gaubert, real estate agent, presided.

White Rouch, who lives at 2539 South Twelfth street, is the tenant affected in the court proceedings, more than 200 other tenants in that neighborhood believe the decision of the Superior Court is a distinct victory in their favor. For four months they have been refusing to pay increased rents.

The court, however, in quashing the appeal, made it possible for the landlord to reopen argument. The question hinges on the right of tenants, who say they are victims of profiteering landlords, to ignore a clause in the monthly lease which they waived their right of appeal from judgment entered against them in court proceedings.

At the meeting it was decided a series of poor parties will be arranged to defray the expenses of the fight against rent profiteers.

The other suit was entered by the father of John Teakola, nine years old, of the same address, who was injured in the same accident. The father demands $5000 for the son and $1000 for himself. Edward Cohen, 1111 Kaighn avenue, Camden, entered suit against the Public Service Railway for $10,000 in the same court. Cohen was hurt when a car of the corporation hit his truck at Woodlawn on July 18.

It was alleged that she was not when he came to try to effect a reunion after she had left him.

The couple were married in 1884, lived together until August, 1913, and the wife left and has remained away since that time. She said ill-treatment forced her to leave him.
