Loses All His Teeth When Caught in Shaft

With every tooth knocked out and seriously injured, Batey, fifteen years old, of 1702 Oxford street, was found crushed between the floor of an elevator and the side of the shaft in the plant of a furniture factory at Ridge and Columbia avenues.

Batey, who was an employe of the ompany, is believed to have lost his balance last night while running the elevator from the second floor to the third floor. His screams brought other workers in the plant to his aid, and he was extricated with difficulty and removed to the Northwestern General Hospital. He sustained a fractured jaw and severe cuts of the head, in addition to internal injuries. His condition is
