

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Hears That the Supper Club Will Probably Be Resumed Next Season—She Regrets the Death of Mr. John A. Brown, Jr.

DON'T say a word, but I heard the loveliest thing whispered yesterday! There's a chance, a possibility, that the old Supper Club, which Mrs. Hutchie Scott used to have at the Ritz first and then at the Bellevue, will start up again next winter. I know for a fact that several of the old committee have urged its being taken up again.

Every one anticipates a wonderful season of balls and so on, but you know most of it is for the debutantes and we older children only go to the big things, so very often there'll be a week or more in which there are no dances for those beyond the debutant stage and a few years more than second-year girls.

The supper club always filled a splendid gap for the married set and the girls of several winters, and every one will be delighted to think that it may be taken up again.

Hutchinson Scott has been living in New York for the last two years, but if she consents to start up the club she will probably come back here to live or will come over for the dances.

The wee bird that told me of this possibility, talked about "delightful music" from some special orchestra never heard here before, and "general" tables for members who do not want to entertain but who want to go and enjoy the hospitality of the club.

Let's hope it happens. I know it will if most of the patrons of the former club have their way.

THE death of Mr. John A. Brown, Jr., at his summer home in Maine came as quite a shock to his many friends and relatives here. Mr. Brown had long figured socially and financially in affairs in Philadelphia and his death will be greatly felt. He had not been very well, it seems, when he and Mrs. Brown started North, but no one thought of any danger in his condition.

Mr. Brown was a son of the late Alexander Brown and a brother of the late Neilson Brown, who was the father of Mrs. Clarence Dolan and of the late Alexander Brown, of this city.

Mr. Brown was married to Mrs. Neilson Brown, who has been living in Paris for many years, coming to this country this summer. Rose Dolan, his granddaughter, has been visiting her in Paris whenever she had leave from her ambulance work during the first Miss Philadelphia.

Mr. Brown was a member of the Philadelphia Yacht Club, and was a member of the Philadelphia Golf and Country Club, and was a member of the Philadelphia Hunt and Fishing Club.

EVEN NERVE IS NOW GOING UP; JUST ASK COOK, SHE KNOWS

Asked to Stand Up When Addressing Employer, She Replies, "Them Days Is Past"

It's a perfectly true story. It happened in an employment agency quite near Rittenhouse Square. The principals in the story are two matrons, whose names gave virtually every social event of importance in this city.

The third person in the story is a cook. The cook was looking for a position. The society women were looking for a cook.

The women left their limousine in front of the employment agency, entered the office where many of the exclusive set obtain their maids and butlers. Their business was briefly explained to the proprietor of the agency.

"Oh, yes," she said, "I have a splendid cook. She will suit. I am sure. She has worked in several of our best families."

The women took note of the maid who was summoned from the room where a number of hopefuls were sitting. A large person, unmistakably a cook, soon confronted them. She evaded the prospective mistresses closely, decided they would be satisfactory and beheaded a sign.

Then she sprang to a chair beside the women.

"I am accustomed to have my maids stand when they speak to me," she said.

The cook looked sternly at the women. A faint blush came to her kitchen-soured face. She swallowed. Then she came into her eyes.

"Ah," she said, "out out that stuff. Them days is past."

The cook did not get the position.

Wray, later became a member of the firm of Elliott Brothers & Co., then was associated with Wood, Brown & Co., representing with it until the firm went out of business. Since that time Mr. Mulholland had been in the dry goods commission business, representing several New York houses, with an office at 525 Chestnut street.

TOWN OF OLD ENGLISH TYPE WILL BE BUILT AT MERION Community Dining Room to Be Feature of Village Life on Old Supplee Estate

A congenial center, the latest thing in modern village life, is being started out at Merion on the old Supplee estate. Nine and a half acres of land lying between Wynnewood Road and the Pennsylvania Railroad are to be converted into a little village of the old English type with a winding road running through the place and houses arranged so that they don't stand in a row, so many feet back from the street and precisely on a line.

The old mansion will be put in order and probably converted into an apartment house with a community dining room for the use of the villagers who are permanently or temporarily without maid service. Other of the old buildings built the early part of the nineteenth century will be torn down to make room for the new houses.

The property has been bought by Walter H. Thomas, who has divided the estate into about twenty lots and is planning houses that will be placed so that each of the property holders will benefit from the arrangement. Some of the houses will view Wynnewood road from the rear. No kitchen will face the next door neighbor's dining room.

One of the very pleasant features of the model village will be its location from the noise of automobile-travelled roads, and yet the community is within easy walking distance of the Merion and Overbrook stations.

Houses in the village will range in price from $15,000 to $25,000, and will conform with the character of the houses surrounding the estate.

Restrictions will be the same as outside the community, with the additional feature that nothing offensive can be permitted that would hurt the congenial atmosphere.

try, at Fifty-second street and Woodland avenue, and built up a fine trade, becoming one of the leaders in his craft. Of late years he went in more for rose growing than for other marketable crops, and his fame in that connection reached far beyond local circles. Visitors from Maine to California interested in roses made George Anderson's one of their first places of visit.

He was one of the crack bowlers of the Floride Club for twenty years, and in the Gun Club few could equal him as a crack shot at the targets. Mrs. Anderson and all of his family of nine children, except one daughter, survive him.

PHILADELPHIA-MADE EXHIBIT TO BE LARGE Nearly All Manufacturers Will Enter Show, Proving City "Workshop of World"

Responsiveness received from industrial concerns in all sections of Philadelphia indicates that the Philadelphia Made Goods Exhibition, which will be held in the First Regiment Armory from September 8 to 14, inclusive, will contain exhibits of virtually every line of goods made here. The exhibition is being arranged by a committee consisting of W. H. Fisher, J. R. Kelly and E. J. DeLoach, with offices in the Waldener Building.

The exhibition, whose object is to demonstrate the commanding position of Philadelphia as the "Market Place of America," was officially endorsed by the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the executive committee, held last Tuesday.

It is the intention of the committee to fill the great floor space of the armory with exhibits which will show why Philadelphia is the "Workshop of the World." It is the first time that an attempt has been made to assemble under one roof the thousands of products which are made here. Nothing which is not made in the Philadelphia district will be shown.

During the period of the exhibition the committee of the Knights' Templar will be in session in this city, and it is expected that more than 100,000 visitors from out of town will be attracted to the exhibition.

The pictures which will be given them of the manufacturing marvels of the Philadelphia district will be taken by them to every part of the country.

It is expected that more than 100,000 persons will attend the exhibition.

Most Always beroulos. Timely vacation hints are given in the first of a series of weekly health bulletins, issued by the Philadelphia tuberculosis committee.

"The questions most prospective vacationists seem to think important," says the bulletin, "are whether there is a piano where they are going; if there is a well-lighted bathroom, or beautiful scenery, or golf links, or good boating and bathing. Rather should they first make sure if the milk is pasteurized; if there is a flyless kitchen; if the water comes from an unpolluted source; if the sewage is properly disposed of."

"Be this understood," continues the bulletin, "the most picturesque and otherwise attractive resorts are not always the safest. Your first consideration should be, where can I find rest and recreation without jeopardizing my health? On making your choice, look out for these facts: That the supply of drinking water comes, not from shallow wells or other sources likely to be polluted; that milk and sweetening are well screened against; that there are sanitary arrangements for the disposal of sewage."
