T IS a trite saying but a true one that "Anything that is worth doing at all is worth doing well." The trouble with most of us is that we acknowledge its truth and go our way, neither giving nor demanding of others the best that we or they can give. There are some however, and alas that their name is not legion, who are cognizant of the fact that the thing that is done well is the thing of lasting worth. And for such as these the Chestnut Street Shops have come into existence. You will find nothing that can be classed as cheap or shoddy in a Chestnut Street Shop, for the proprietors of these stores believe, as do their patrons, that that which is best is least expensive in the end.

coolness of the ambrosia of the gods. And their name does not belie them. Henry R. Hallowell & Son, of Broad than all the other shops in town And their name does not belle them. Henry R. Hallowell & Son, of Broad below Chestnut street, report that they are exceedingly large and de-licious. A shipment of Elberta peaches has just been received from Georgia, and Hallowell's have also good news for those who are fond of California malaga grapes. Those ijust received are particularly fine and make a delicious addition to the fruit salads so popular during the warm months of July and August. Judging from the interest shown in the Bartlett pears since their arrival was heralded about a week ago, there are many lovers of this par-ticularly choice fruit in Philadelphia.

N INVESTMENT that you will never regret is the purchase of a good piece of furniture. Fur-ire that is well made and in niture niture that is well made and in good taste is not lightly cast aside with each whim of fashion, but out-lasts the cheaper imitations and looks better in its second youth than looks better in its second youth than do pieces of inferior quality when they are new. So prepare, with the opening, on July 28, of the Furni-ture Sale at the store of Joseph G. Darlington & Co., Inc., 1126-28 Chestnut street, to replace your worn furnishings with pieces of the best quality obtainable. Everything in the sale has been reduced, and you will be surprised at the remark-ably reasonable prices asked for fur-niture which is of such excellent guality. quality.

"I HAVE often wondered just what my status will be in the future world," said a well-known professor the other day, "for I am certain I shall never be able to perform upon the harp. In fact, it is difficult for me to determine whether an orchestra is playing a selection from Beethoven or merely tuning up."

I FYOU have not yet had one of Thommen's famous dollar chicken dinners, why, then you have a surprise in store for you. The next time that the cook, for any reason, or for no reason at all, departs without warning, just make a bee-line for Thommen's. They have two restaurants, you know, one at 1700 Chestnut street, and the other at 1520 Market street. The dollar chicken dinner is served at both luncheon and dinner time. Chicken, with fresh vegetables and cherry or blackberry pie-can you imagine any more delicious combination of toothsome delicacies? Thommen's have long been famous for the excellence of their dinners, and the chicken dinner is one more proof of their happy faculty of selecting just the right combination of tooth-some delicacies to please the palate.
