JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Chats About Tearing Down of a Well-Known Old House in Chestnut Hill—Philadelphian Practices on Organ in "Movie"

WELL, after October, Chestnut Hill will feel as if it had lost its eyebrows or something, because the Dust Pan is to be torn down. Just imagine Chestnut Hill without the Dust Pan! Do you know the place? I'm sure you've heard of it, if you don't know it. It stands at the intersection of Germantown avenue, Bethlehem pike and Summit avenue-is it Summit or Sunset, I always get them mixed? The real and proper christened name is Maple Lawn Inn, but it's always been called the Dust Pan, probably on account of the dusty location, and it always sounds sort of familiar and affectionate.

The house is more than 200 years old, and was originally a wayside inu-I suppose people traveled out Bethlehem pike as much then as they do now. although possibly not so fast. After that for a time it was a country store, where all the people used to gather to gossip. Perhaps that's how it came to e so well known, because everybody in Chestnut Hill does know it.

I don't believe there are many families that haven't stayed there for time, while the house was being don over or something of that kind, and even if they haven't stayed there they knew they could. And lots of prominent people have lived there-I mean people like George Washington. It probably was his headquarters once. almost every old house has been at some time during its long life. Wouldn't it be funny to feel that a perfectly plain brown-stone house may some time be visited by people from all over the country just because you once lived there?

But did I remark in passing why the nounced. Dust Pan is to be torn down? 1 did HEARD such an interesting thing May, about Elizabeth Casanave the other day. She and her mother and all her others-she has about five-are down in Atlantic City for the summer. Eliza beth is very musical, and her special talent is for the organ. She is studying here in town, and while she is away she still works at it and every morning she goes to one of the movie house down there and practices on a perfectly wonderful organ that is installed there. She is there before the movies start, course, but at that time the electricians and things, whatever they all are, are trying over the new picture for the afternoon, and if she cared to look up from her work she could get first shot at all the new plays, but she prefers to practice because she loves it Her mother plays beautifully on the harp. The Casanaves live in Overook in the winter.

DO YOU know any of those disconcerting people who see something turn to you and remark quietly in a conversational tone, "Do you see the the same thing? Difficult, very. There are so many of them in the world. But, Wyncote. at least, they know what you are going through. With children it's different,

BIG DANCE TONIGHT ON RECREATION PIER

Chestnut Street Wharf Decorated for Occasion; Wraps Will Be Needed, Is Warning

Cool breezes all the time! Bring your wraps. You will need them, And right in the heart of the city and in the very middle of summer. It makes you shiver to think of it.

The Chestnut Street Recreation Pier is the place. It has been decorated for a dance to be given this evening by the tennis club.

Lanterns, flags and streamers have transformed the pavilion into a gay place for the event, which is the first of the season and is given for the purpose of increasing the membership in the club. A fine floor, a first class band and refreshments are added inducements to guarantee the success of the dance. A warning is issued to all who will attend that wraps will be needed. Breezes from the Delaware river sweep the pier day and night and provide an ideal recreation center for both children and grown-ups. Attendance at the center this year has been unusually large. From five to seven hundred persons use it daily. Many of the younger men and women employed down town spend their noon hour at the pier or come later in the day or in the evening. Between times reighborhood children and their mothers sit in the shade and enjoy the breezes Joseph Schwarz, one-mile runner, is the director of the center's activities and has organized a variety of athletic teams for track, tennis, baseball, dedge

Effort has been made to get two tennis courts for the uncovered part of the pier, but so far, the equipment has not been provided. The center is also without shower baths and is making up for this lack by using a hose.
