

And So They Were Married

RUTH had not seen Scott during the entire evening. When the good-night wafts came, and no one came to ask her to dance she really felt angry.

She watched the couples pair off for the last dance in accordance with the way they liked each other.

Dot of all people! And the last dance. She saw the tall captain come up to her and knew that Scott had taken Dot away from him.

As she got up to go inside with the captain, she heard Mrs. Moore call after her laughingly.

"I see your husband has finally been lured into the dance floor."

Scott shot a glance at her and knew that something was wrong, but he said nothing.

Once at home, however, Beatrice waked up. She was instantly hungry.

Mrs. Moore seemed to take for granted the fact that Ruth and Scott did not want to forage for food.

Afterward when they were actually alone in their room, neither spoke.

"What do you want me to say? You began things by taking this attitude."

"And you think I had no justification for it?" Ruth's tone was tense.

This was the climax, that Scott should not even know what he had done.

Scott's surprise was genuine. "I didn't know that anything was wrong, until you began to treat me coldly at the dance."

He had his arms about her now and was whispering, "What is it?"

"Your leaving me all evening," she burst out, "and then dancing the last dance with some one else."

"But I couldn't find you anywhere," Scott persisted.

Ruth's heart was singing again. He had looked for her! The cloud was lifting.

"That Dot Salisbury is an adorable little thing, don't you think so, Ruth?"

Dot Salisbury of all people for Scott to mention particularly as young and artless, a scheming little flirt!

(Tomorrow, Ruth turns the tables.)

Scott asked her, as they were going out to the machine.

"Oh yes, have you?" Ruth's tone was fey.

Scott shot a glance at her and knew that something was wrong, but he said nothing.

Once at home, however, Beatrice waked up. She was instantly hungry.

Mrs. Moore seemed to take for granted the fact that Ruth and Scott did not want to forage for food.

A Poem to Dead Mother To the Editor of the Woman's Page: Dear Madam—I am taking the liberty of forwarding you a poem I composed in memory of my mother.

MY MOTHER I often see her in my dreams, My beautiful mother, I often sit when the moon beams, Thinking of my mother.

I wander back from the morrow, I stand before her bier, The perfume of her flowers, Is maddening to me here.

Ruth Farnum's Address To the Editor of the Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Will you kindly tell us Sergeant Ruth Farnum's address as soon as possible?

-pillows Got Musty To the Editor of the Woman's Page: Dear Madam—It seems whenever I am in real need of advice I turn to you as you have helped me before.

Adventures With a Purse

HERE'S a little sale in plated silverware I think you will be interested in. In the first place, the design is quite good—so well liked, in fact, that the supply of some of the pieces is already exhausted.

Sorry It Can't Be Done To the Editor of the Woman's Page: Dear Madam—About ten days ago I bought a very pretty net design—the kind used for making the bead bags—also beads enough to complete it and a good quality shell top.

I am sorry, F. L. D., that I can't help you, but one of the rulings of the column is that nothing be sold through it.

My Baby's First Summer

WHEN the days and the nights began to be hot and sultry, my baby began to droop.

I thought a baby properly cared for should be as well and as happy in summer as in winter, so I asked my doctor.

"Why, of course," he said, "We'll give him Nestlé's Milk Food."

So now I know I don't have to be afraid of hot weather. With plenty of cool baths and light enough clothing, and with Nestlé's digesting easily in that little stomach, my baby goes happily on to health and strength.

Nestlé's is just pure milk in modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!
