

PENNSYLVANIA GUARD TO BE CALLED 28TH

Men Will Be Entitled to Wear
Insignia of Red Keystone on Shoulder

RECRUITING TO BE PUSHED

The new Pennsylvania State Guard will be known as the Twenty-eighth division, and its individual members will be entitled to wear the red keystone.

This was decided at a conference between Major General William G. Price, Jr., commander; Adjutant General David Davis and Brigadier General Richard, Shannon and Coulter at the Union League today.

Plans were made for the commencement of active recruiting of the new unit in the early fall. Lists of officers who served with the Keystone Division in France were examined. These officers will be sent blank applications to fill out if they wish to return to service. All the old organizations that went to France will be reinstated.

Adjutant General Henry has worked out a tentative plan for the reorganization of the National Guard, which will provide for a complete tactical unit and probably for the organization of eight of the infantry regiments which went to Camp Hancock as complete regiments, in the new guard. Four of these will be in the division and the other four will be corps troops. The regiments which will likely be reconstituted are the old First, Third, Sixth, Eighth, Tenth, Thirteenth, Sixteenth and Eighteenth, the Fourth becoming a machine-gun battalion.

The general is also arranging for use by the three artillery regiments of six batteries for training purposes. The complete equipment will be issued within a year. The guns will be distributed among the new regiments as soon as formed and recognized. There will be two horse batteries of 75s and two motor batteries of 155s.

The organizations will probably be divided, first and second brigade and artillery brigade headquarters; supply train of headquarters and six truck companies; ammunition train of headquarters and six truck companies; sanitary train of four ambulance companies and four field hospitals; engineer regiment of headquarters and six lettered companies; engineers' train of a searchlight and pontoon section; battalion of signal troops including headquarters, wire, radio and outpost companies; three regiments of artillery, each with headquarters, headquarters company, supply company with six lettered batteries; one regiment of cavalry with headquarters, headquarters troop, machine gun, supply and twelve lettered troops.

Infantry regimental organizations will include headquarters, supply, machine gun and twelve lettered companies.

WAGER-SMITHS TO LEAVE

"Gasless Sunday" Episode Followed by Retirement From Lansdowne E. Wager-Smith and family are leaving Lansdowne, and, it is reported, their abode marks the beginning of permanent residence in New York state.

With the departure of the Wager-Smith family Lansdowne writes "finis" to an episode of "gasless Sunday" and its alleged violation by Mr. Wager-Smith.

This incident had its climax when Mr. and Mrs. Wager-Smith, disregarding the fuel administration, rode from their home, Marshall road and Wyncome avenue, to St. John's Episcopal Church, one and one-half miles, in their automobile. When they emerged the car was plastered with "slacker" signs and overripe tomatoes, while punctured tires and an empty gasoline tank further evidenced popular displeasure.

Some 200 persons witnessed Mr. Wager-Smith's discomfiture. His demands for apology from the borough council unheeded, Mr. Wager-Smith set about plans for removal. An auctioneer yesterday sold their household belongings, including the damaged automobile.

TAX BOARD WANTS TIME

Public Service Appeals in Gloucester Entail Much Work

The Camden county board of taxation has decided that it needs more time to consider the testimony in the tax appeals on the Gloucester shipyard and the appeals of the Public Service Corporation on the personal assessments throughout the county.

A decision was to have been made yesterday, and now the board has decided that it will take two weeks more before a decision can be given. There is much testimony and many briefs to be gone over. A decision is expected about August 14.
