

JING JOHNSON, OF OUR ATHLETICS, IS JUST AS LIBERAL WITH HITS AS A LANDLORD WITH REPAIRS

LEW TENDLER NEVER FELT FIRST PUNCH THAT FLOORED HIM

Southpaw Didn't Know What Hit Him, and Was Awakened When He Heard Referee Count Six

NOTES FROM RINGSIDE

By JAMES S. CAROLAN

THE old story of painless departure is revived. The knockout is the well-known path to the exits and to the dressing room without pain.

Those who have been the victims of the one punch to the vital spot often smile when told of it later. Johnny Dundee once went out for fifteen minutes and upon receiving assistance upon starting the "next" round.

Lew Tendler last night took a right on the chin and for five seconds was noncommunicative and nonmobile. Lew was a stranger in his own home town.

The great southpaw didn't know what hit him, when he was struck or how it happened. All he knew was that he was on the floor when the haze cleared and he saw Referee O'Brien standing over him. He heard the referee count "six," "seven," and at "eight" he realized it was time to get up. He waited for "nine," then limped to his pins.

Survives Worst

After that all was well. He had survived the worst, had taken Jackson's best and was in a receptive mood. The curtains had raised and all was bright and cheerful. The dark and stormy session had passed.

All this information was disclosed in a dressing-room conversation with the southpaw.

"Well, how did it feel, Lew?" smiled one of his interrogators.

"What do you mean, feel?" replied the gladiator. "Where did he hit me? I didn't see anything coming and you can't duck what you don't see."

"Did it hurt?" continued the questioner.

"It didn't feel it," explained Tendler. "I wasn't even awake when he hit me. They call a knockout I would just as soon take one as to receive a bad wallop over the eye or on the nose. It's what I call painless punishment."

Jawn O'Brien Orates

An Promoter and Manager Phil Glassman turned to his protege the perspiration was still streaming from his beaming brow.

"Boys, I wouldn't take $5000 and go through it again," gurgled the youthful promoter. "No, I wouldn't take $10,000. This is the first time I ever had my legs give way. It was a close call. Lew's a great fighter. He's a game boy. I'll never lose confidence in him again."

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien was standing nearby. He raised a smile that rivaled the radiation of a bright summer sun.

"Gentlemen," sang Philadelphia Jawn. "it was some night and some fight. Lew is the modern arctic man. I never witnessed a cooler or gamer exhibition. The kid's there."

Having collected all the data possible under the conditions, Philadelphia Jawn led the march from the room to the streets. There Joe Dempsey, the former oarsman and later coach of Jack Kelly, was loafing by in his Packard. The party was safely conveyed to the city.

A messenger from the Jackson camp was admitted to the Dempsey party. He was calmly excited.

"Follows, that's some wild place over there," exclaimed the excited youth as he pointed to Jackson's headquarters.

"Joe Bagley's all up in the air. Jackson's badly battered and looks like the victim of a race riot. Everything's wrong. Bagley and Jackson think the world's against them, and what's the use of lingering with such an unsociable gang."

Ring Side Rings

Howard Lytle informed Joe Kelly before moving from Box 6 that Jackson still was a great fighter. Howard was opposed to the unannounced shower when Lew was on the canvas. John Evans and Captain Frank Bale voiced Mr. Lytle's sentiments.

Jack Spraul, the Governor's son, quickly viewed the sensational struggle from a box chair. Eddie White was his guest. Mr. Spraul had first-hand information of the Willard-Dempsey clash and was in a position to pass judgment on the Tendler-Jackson fray.

Sam Gross was discovered mingling with the few ring-side boys. Louis Kamp treated the wandering Sammys. Others observed the exciting struggle. Among them were Harry Doctor, O'Connell, Joe Cervino, Russell Edwards, Eddie Egan, Harry Imber, George Imber and Yankee Schwartz.

Alf Clarke glittered in the dark reaches of the spacious stadium. He was accompanied by Richard Walsh, Mike and John Murphy and Alf Boyd. Mr. Walsh came well decorated, wearing a beautiful white plaster over the left eye. And still he was many feet from the ring.

Herman Taylor and Robert Gunnis, the hustling promoters, observed the entertainment from the stands. Jack Weinstein, treasurer of the organization, and George Engel, Benny Leonard's trainer, were seated with the duo of speeding promoters.

Coroner Knight and his son, who just returned from France, were observed in one of the boxes. Judge Egan, J. Bonnell and Senator Monahan also were among those present.

Frank Black was host to Senator Phil Crockett. Hugh Gannon also was present. Dr. E. W. Sullivan and Ben Frankford, the latter of Pittsburgh, rooted viciously for Tendler.

Dr. G. Wittman and Charles Heeb led the cheering section along newspaper rows. They were assisted by Frank Poth, the strike-out king; Jim Ferick, Sammy Vogelson, Bill Matchett, "Bronnie," Ray Campbell, Hugh Doyle, Tommy Farrell, Joe Slavin, Jack McKeehan, Ray Perkins and Bill Evans, the big league umpire; Artie Heeb, Jack Moses and Yankee Schwartz.

A few fans at the ringside gave Willie Jackson a very unappreciative greeting. Jackson fought a game, clean fight and was deserving of better treatment than he received.

Four famous trainers were present—Jack Hagen, the noted Penn base ball conditioner; Jimmy DeForest, Jack Dempsey's first aide; Johnny Loftus and Pat O'Connell, O'Connell is the trainer of the Vaucian steeds.

Dr. W. H. Goddard, after a long absence, finally found his way to the ringside. He was asked for a scientific explanation of a knockout at the moment Tendler hit the canvas, but he refused to be interviewed.

Eddie Lewis, the former railroad magnate, was host at a Packard party. Joe Dempsey and Cliff Culver were his guests.

Dr. William B. Stearns and Dr. John Stearns were the guests of Dr. George W. Wittman.

The fraternal system was well represented among those present. Among them were: Leo Flinn, John Fitzsimmons, Frank Brown, Barney Adair, Johnny Clinton, A. Thomson, Frankie Dancy and Joe Mendel.

The four referee system served to keep interest in the battles. Lew O'Brien officiated in two, the first and fourth. Jawn O'Brien, dressed for the occasion, kept the boys moving. His footwork was a treat. Sam Lewis, of the People's Theater, and Frank (Pop) O'Brien took care of the other two bouts.

Eddie Walker had another strenuous night on the pass gate. But at that, it wasn't any harder than the job assigned the boys on the gate which admitted the scribes and others to the field. Pat McHale, George Brandt and Reserve Officer Bob Dixon took good care of this important duty. Jimmy Haney had to put the O. K. on all to pass.

JOHNSON CANCELS A'S WOULD THRIVE IF EPIDEMIC CAME

Mays Case Session

Affair Not to Be Settled by Magistrates—Ban Part Owner of Indians, Is Accusation

TY COBB AFFAIR IS CITED JING'S 3D STRAIGHT

New York, Aug. 5.—The case of Carl Mays, pitcher, whose suspension by President Johnson after Mays had been traded by the Boston club to the New York Yankees, which bids fair to result in one of the bitterest wars of organized baseball, will not be settled by the American League club owners.

President Johnson, who came to New York to preside at a meeting of the league called for today, announced that the special meeting would not be held. The owners of the Yankees, Colonel Jacob Ruppert and Lieutenant Colonel T. L. Huston, told Johnson that they planned to start the season by postponing that was snatched from the Browns yesterday and stomach-troubled Fred Thomas, who just forsook his bed after a few days under the sheets, hit .333 for the afternoon, took part in the scoring of one run and registered one himself, something unusual for Fredrick.

The sick-appears to be the slump-appears to be a lot of force and energy was an epidemic may mean first division.

Dick Barcus may be added to the crippled list. It's not any too healthy to see another making good in your job.

"Don't see where this sick spell's going to help me out," was the criticism of the day with the Brown club. "The A's baseball has been sick for a long while."

Perkins Arises

RALPH PERKINS is one of the athletes who don't need any sick-appears. The youthful Mr. Perkins arose in his wrath yesterday and with one swipe ruined Jimmy Burke's idea of cleaning the series. It was Ralph's circuit crack in the seventh that demoralized the position. The Braves were knotted at two when Perk hid a Diamond pitch in the bleachers. Two were on base at the time, so the blow produced three markers. Ralph's out in the eighth made another run possible, so the black-haired A's nonsman was responsible for four of the seven Mack runs.

A poke in a pinch proved Perkins a pecker.

Eddie's favorite says Perkins could hit his dime on second base, but you can't hit his bat on a ten-cent whip.

Perk hasn't any more variety in his base ball than Mr. Helms in his pickle. He has hit the bases, he has stolen bases, he has caught, he has never been called in to pitch, but he's called for pitchers.

Third in Row for Jing

IF you should stop to think about it, little "Jingling" Johnson is pitching right sweet ball at present. His 7:5 win over the Browns yesterday was his third in a row. During the series in Washington he gave the Senators the pit-burg today for a game with the Pirates. Gene Packard was responsible for the Chicago 5-2 defeat yesterday. He kept eight hits well scattered and drove in the winning run with a double. It was his second win on the trip.

With Packard, Paulette and Meadows going in great shape, St. Louis is making Philadelphia famous.

Two Series for Phils

THE Phils have bagged two series in the West. They took a pair of games from the Cards and three out of four from the Cubs. They move to Pittsburgh today for a game with the Pirates. Gene Packard was responsible for the Chicago 5-2 defeat yesterday. He kept eight hits well scattered and drove in the winning run with a double. It was his second win on the trip.

With Packard, Paulette and Meadows going in great shape, St. Louis is making Philadelphia famous.

"Eddie Rickenbacker R Day" was celebrated in San Francisco last Saturday at a game between the Seals and Seattle. When Bill Clymer, the manager of the Seattle club, was approached to make arrangements for the affair he was told that the game would be set aside in honor of the American flying ace. "Who's Rickenbacker?" Willyum demanded. Please, page Mr. Ford.

Speaking of ace, the Cards looked like demes against the Dodgers. The Ricks' record was split, with one win and one loss, dropped three out of four to the Rubies.

Pickie Famel, Dave Shean, who made Jack Barry take a seat while he second baser for the Red Sox, has been released. Red Shean, who had a third-inning with the A's, has his job now.

TO COACH RED SOX

Heine Wagner, the veteran ex-shortstop of the Boston Red Sox, has been given a berth on his old club. He returns to Coach in the capacity of coach in the capacity of coach.

ANTIPODEAN TENNIS PLAYERS SCRATCHED

Australian Cracks Not Able to Reach Newport Before Thursday

"COMET" IS IN FINE FORM

Newport, R. I., Aug. 5.—The four Australian tennis players, Gerald Paterson, Randolph Lycett, H. V. Thomas and Norman E. Brooks, who had been entered in the annual invitation tournament at the Newport Casino, were scratched in the singles today when it was learned that they could not reach here until Thursday. They are expected to appear in the doubles.

The surprises of the first-round matches were the defeat of Vincent Richards of New York, one of the national doubles champions, by Clarence F. Griffin of San Francisco, in four sets, and the difficulty which William M. Johnston, of San Francisco, former national champion, had in disposing of J. W. Foster, of Boston.

Although Johnston won in straight sets, two of these went to extra games and there were fifteen deuce games. The California star was in good form but Foster showed unexpected strength.

William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia, beat Stanley Mortimer, Jr., Newport, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1.

McLaughlin rumped through the match with Harriman by a score of 6-1, 6-0, 6-1 in the first round.

McLaughlin's best stroke and most effective point-winning shot as he played yesterday afternoon was his forehand drive through deep court. The ball carried a world of top spin, so that "Red Mac" could lean all his weight behind the stroke and still keep the ball within the court confines. He fairly hurled up the court with his forehand drive, the ball traveling low over the net and dropping into Harriman's court fast.

For those who are wondering how McLaughlin is going to fare in the national championship singles at the West Side Tennis Club at the end of this month, this fact may prove of interest: That the "Comet" always noted for the power and dynamic qualities of his overhead play, seems to have curved his inclinations in that direction and has turned his attention to the ground strokes in which he was formerly lacking in the fullest sense of the word.

William F. Fildes of New York, had considerable difficulty in defeating Robert Kinsey, the young California star, in the second round. The score was 6-4, 7-5, 12-10.

In another feature match of the second round W. M. Johnston, of California, former national champion, defeated H. C. Johnson, former Massachusetts titleholder, 6-2, 6-3, 1-6, 6-2.

COOGAN BEATS DUNDEE

Brooklyn Lightweight imitates Style of Rival and Earns Decision

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 5.—Mick Coogan, of Brooklyn, had a shade the better of Johnny Dundee, of New York, in an eight-round bout here last night. Coogan imitated Dundee's peculiar style of boxing and made him miss frequently. Coogan weighed 132 pounds and Dundee 123.

Dundee took the lead in the opening round, but was held down in the next three. In the fifth and sixth sessions Coogan had the advantage, landing hard rights to the body and head. The seventh was even, and in the eighth Dundee failed in an attempt to overcome Coogan's advantage.
