

FRATERNAL ORDERS PLAN FOR JUBILEE

Mayor Encourages Plan for Demonstration to Be Held Early Next Month

COMMITTEE IS NAMED

With the appointment of a committee representing various fraternal bodies in this city to prepare a big "peace jubilee" plans are being worked out today for one of the biggest demonstrations ever held here.

Mayor Smith said he had been trying in vain to feel the pulse of the people of Philadelphia regarding the jubilee, and that if the sentiment was as strong as pictured the city would have a celebration merging with that of the fraternalists.

Mayor Is Delighted "I will continue the grand stands in the Parkway, and have them properly painted and decorated," said the Mayor.

The committee includes representatives of Jewish, Catholic, Protestant, industrial and nonsectarian bodies and embraces every fraternal order in the city in its scope.

POLICE FORCE STRIKES; HE GOT $10 PER—WANTED MORE

So Now the Fishermen at Bowers Beach, Del., Must Angle, Sans Protection of Lone "Cop"

The entire police force of Bowers Beach, Del., is on strike today, leaving Philadelphia anglers, who go there for fish, without any sort of protection while they ply rod and line.

The police force is Howard Litz, who is chief of police, traffic policeman and detective bureau, all in one.

Litz went into executive session with himself and called the strike after deciding that the grievances of the Bowers Beach police force could no longer be endured.

When Litz returned from service in the army in France, he got the job of chief of police, et cetera. He says he was paid $10 a week, working every day, including Sunday, from 12 o'clock noon until midnight. He wanted $3 a day, but was told that the town treasury could not stand such an expenditure.

Says $2 Not Enough After some negotiations with the grievance committee of the police force, consisting again of Litz, the Bowers Beach authorities offered a compromise proposition. The police force was offered an additional $2 a week, but it would have to be on duty from 6 o'clock in the morning until midnight. This meant an extra six hours every day, not forgetting Sunday, and Litz decided that $2 was not enough for forty-two hours of vigilance.

So the police force took off its uniform and all the tinselled trappings of office, and returned to miff. "Everybody in Bowers Beach, with the exception of those who handle the problem of making the town's cash last through the year, sympathizes with the police force."

"Big Thursday" Near There is some uneasiness in Bowers Beach today because tomorrow is "Big Thursday" among fishermen, when thousands of anglers, most of them from Philadelphia, will be there.

"Big Thursday" is usually an exciting time in Bowers Beach, and the police force is needed to check the unscrupulous who turn from fishing to crabsnatching and other forbidden pursuits. But the police strike threatens to leave Bowers Beach helpless in the grasp of the crab-shooters from the wicked world outside.

Deaths of a Day

THOMAS DONAHUE

Veteran Railroad Man Dies Shortly After His Wife

The death of Thomas Donahue, seventy-two years, 1411 North Allison street, yesterday, ten days after the death of his wife, ended a half-century-old romance which began when what is now Forty-second and Market streets, was practically a village.

Arthur B. Eaton, secretary of the societies, was in conference with Mayor Smith at City Hall, to whom he gave evidence of an overwhelming sentiment throughout the city in favor of a jubilee as a tribute to Philadelphians who were in the service.

FIRE COMPANY MAY BRAVE CHURCHES' IRE

Fair to Raise Funds Likely to Be Held Despite Protest

ONLY WAY TO GET MONEY

The Collingswood (N. J.) Fire Company No. 1, is in the limelight again and there seems to be much ado over the fact that the company is seriously considering reviewing its one-time popular fair and festival.

The fete is planned to raise funds to meet the heavy expenses of the company, which is a volunteer institution. Members pay annual dues for part of its upkeep and maintenance.

For the last decade churches of the suburb have been offering strenuous protest to the fire company giving the fair because of alleged gambling features, which the company claim were chief features of delight and expenditure of patrons and the best means of raising funds.

In efforts to get the fire company to drop the fairs as a means of revenue several of the different church officials proffered support to the company in the way of campaigns in each of the churches. It was suggested that the supporting church collect $2 a year from each member. This would require approximately 800 contributing members, 400 of which, the company was given to believe, would come from the First Methodist Episcopal Church, which has a membership of nearly 1200.

on the Sunday night at which the pastor preached a stirring sermon on "Fire," and when contributing members were solicited.

At the recent meeting of the fire company the financial secretary, Philip G. Knebel, reported that this church had credit for only seventy-one contributing members and that all the east side churches objecting to the fair did not respond to the campaign. It was shown that the company had a deficit of $1500 or more and that something had to be done to make it up.

Then someone suggested the fair movement and others agreed. It was said that many of these volunteer firemen are "sore" because the churches fell down on their proposition and now it was up to the company to do something that would bring the necessary results.

Mayor Thomas W. Jack, who has been president of the fire company for fifteen years, and Harry W. Smith, who has been its treasurer for twenty-five years, are members of the Methodist Church, and were present at the church-campaign service. They have used their influence and good graces to have this contributing membership campaign a financial success.

All Metal Conducts Heat

SHEET steel, oil stoves, frying pans, kettles, and the old-fashioned plain-wall steel filing cabinets—all these metal articles are quick conductors of heat. (We ourselves make a variety of plain wall steel filing cabinets, but not for fire or heat-protection.)

Plain steel is fine for cooking utensils but impossible for filing cabinets, used in offices where there's a fire risk. But—

Asbestos repels heat

THAT is why we build our Fire-wall cabinets —for fire protection—with asbestos lining, like safes. Asbestos, as everybody knows, is one of the best protective elements against fire and heat. If it were ever built into oil stoves, it would defeat the purpose of the stove; but, used within double steel walls, it makes a filing cabinet three to thirty times as protective against fire and heat as any plain-wall cabinet made. This exclusive construction is found only in

FIRE-WALL STEEL FILING CABINETS

"FIRE-WALL" construction goes all around the cabinet. At top, bottom, front, sides, and back there is an interlining of asbestos, placed in a protected air chamber and enclosed in two strong walls of steel.

Cost no more

THOUGH "Y and E" Fire-Wall Cabinets protect your records over three times as well, they cost no more. In spite of this asbestos construction—in spite of four additional features, these better cabinets are sold at the price of ordinary steel filing equipment. One fire will convince you. Why wait for a fire? It will pay you to get our new booklet: "Steel Cabinets that Protect" and "Vertical Filing Down-to-Date."
