We are hearing a great deal about thrift these days. Extravagance is the crying evil of the age, according to one captain of industry, who has contributed his opinion to the general symposium on the high cost nas contributed his opinion to the general symposium on the high cost of living. Most of us are accustomed to think of the word "thrift" in connection with saving. The wider connectation includes also wise investment—and it is wise investment, not hoarding, which will bring you returns on your money. The buying of goods of the quality sold in the Chestnut Street Snops is always a wise investment, for you are repaid in the service which articles of good quality will give you.
