MANY COAST STARS AFTER TENNIS CROWN

East Has Largest Sectional Entry List, but Californians Have Galaxy of Great Players

PLANS ARE COMPLETE

ALTHOUGH the East will have the largest representation of any section of the country at the national tennis tournament at Forest Hills next week, the players from the coast are going to make a strong bid for honors.

The failure of McLoughlin to come through the national doubles does not mean that the Gray may not make a good showing in the singles. He has rounded into good form again and there are many followers of the game who believe that he will be among those present when the finals are played next Saturday.

O. W. coast stars sure to make a lot of trouble for the easterners are William M. Johnston, former national champion; Tom Bundy, McLoughlin's doubles partner and former doubles champion; Willis E. Davis, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania; Clarence J. Griffin, who with Johnson was beaten Saturday in the doubles final by the Australians, Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson; Clarence A. Barker, clay court champion of southern California; Robert Allen, Vandysie Johns, Harold Goddard, Clyde Curley and several other young players who have never been east to play before.

Outside Entries

The trans-Pacific entry includes besides the Australian players, Brookes, Patterson, Lynch and Cameron, Kashin, Koshino and Kawaguchi, Kashin holds the Canadian championship, while Kawaguchi's playing this season has given all his opponents plenty of reason to worry. With the attention centered on the Australian visitors, there has been some tendency to overlook the importation of American stars, but the widespread distribution of sufficient guarantee is a pre-war basis in the United States.

The entertainment of the visiting players during the national championship which is in the hands of a committee which includes Charles Fox, president of the National Tennis Club and Stuart Johnston. They have arranged a dinner which will take place at the Vanderbilt Hotel, in New York, on Wednesday evening, August 27. The Vanderbilt will be headquarters for players and officials during the tournament. In addition to the dinner there will be theatricals and other entertainments. Announcement of the details will be made on the opening day of the championship.

The first annual meeting of the National Tennis Empire Association will be held at the Vanderbilt Hotel on Thursday evening, August 28. Fred H. Johnson is chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner preceding the meeting. A constitution will be adopted and officers elected, after which there will be a free-for-all discussion of interpretations that have come to the umpire's attention during the season.

Umpires Ready

Edward C. Conlin is in charge of the officials for the national championship and has word from about 100 members of the association promising to be on hand for the opening matches, so that there probably will be no shortage of officials.

A meeting of the executive committee of the U. S. N. T. A. will be held during the championship. Dr. Sumner Hardy, of San Francisco, and Walter A. Goss, of Portland, are members of the committee who have not been east for a couple of seasons, will be present. J. B. Adoue, Jr., is coming from Dallas, and as the representatives from the Middle West are expected to attend, advice on conditions throughout the country will be had.

PLAY FOR DOUBLES TITLE

Norman E. Brookes (shown above in action) and Gerald L. Patterson, Australian stars, are endeavoring to win the national doubles tennis championship with William T. Tilden, 2d, and Vincent Richards in play at Newton, Mass.

Ed Clarey Leads Quimet by One Up

Ed Clarey of the Bala Country Club, Philadelphia, shot to the front when it was discovered he was leading Francis Quimet, of Boston, the former amateur champion, by a margin of one up at eighteen holes. Conditions were much improved over yesterday, but Quimet plainly showed that his prowess did not help his game. Clarey, however, never shot better golf, and his one-up margin was no accident.

George W. Hooper, another Bala entry, had a softer lead than Gardner White, the star New Yorker. When the scores were computed it was found that Hooper was four up on the Gahmnie. Hooper continued to play the consistent game that carried him through the qualification rounds.

J. Wood Platt surprised when he led John G. Anderson, of New York, national summer up in 1917. In Detroit, at the Chicago club, Platt again failed to find any magic in his mallet. This made the Bala men only one down, and he was within halting distance of Quimet on the seventh.

Clarey drove low into the bank of a trap and buried his ball three inches. He dug away the first with his second and a wonderful out with his third and finally approached the hole with his driver. The cards for the first nine holes follow:

Clarey was right back on the eighth, however, when he drove the green and took the regulation two putts for a three and a win. Quimet being on the green from the tee. On the ninth both were home in three, but Quimet sank his second on 9, and Clarey on 10. On the 10th Clarey was out on 11, while Quimet played the hole perfectly and scored a win.

TILDEN AND RICHARDS MAY DEFAULT CROWN

Champions, Declare They Can Wait No Longer for Play With Australian Stars

WEATHER IS UNFAVORABLE

Newton, Mass., Aug. 19.—Unfavorable weather was forecast again today for the challenge round of the national lawn tennis doubles championship tournament at the Longwood Cricket Club in which William T. Tilden, 2d, and Vincent Richards, the titlistholders, will play the Australians, Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson.

Tilden and Richards both have announced that if the match is not played today, they will be unable to wait in Boston longer. Tilden has business engagements in Philadelphia, and is very keen to play in the Southampton tournament.

Richards at Montclair, N. J., scheduled to begin yesterday, if he hopes to qualify for the junior national championship tournament at Forest Hills next week.

Brookes and Patterson both are entered at Southampton, but are willing to stay here until the doubles championship is decided.

Rain Wins

The rain won yesterday without the loss of a single point.

Tilden and Patterson acknowledged themselves beaten, after taking one look at the court, but Tilden was not easily convinced and insisted that he and Richards were ready and anxious, very anxious, to proceed with the match.

The challenge round match will be played on the grandstand court at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Your tickets will be good on that day.

Sheaf has been making that same management ever since last Friday, and although each time the rain has made a "pre-emptive" out of him, as they say in Bostonian slang, he still believes his words.

Fans Disgusted

But the rest of Boston's tennis following public, not to mention the players themselves, are not inclined to take matters so philosophically. They are disgusted, down-hearted and miffed. In fact, some of the regulars are actually bold-headed in their sentiments and muttered threats are heard on all sides against the existing order of government in the elements.

William Penn Charter School

No. 8 South Twelfth Street PHILADELPHIA

Founded in 1869 and chartered by William Penn on the same day as the city of Philadelphia. The Penn Charter School has maintained an uninterrupted corporate existence during the past 44 years. The school has graduated over 1200 pupils, of whom more than 1000 have continued their studies in a score of universities and professional schools. The unusual proportion of alumni who have taken one or more university degrees is largely due to the character and permanence of the school staff, numbered over 20 members. Of these the six senior members have given to the school an average term of service of 26 years. For three years there have been no changes in the staff, save additions to meet the requirements of increased enrollment, which has already taken to capacity the new building added to equipment last year. Magnificent playing fields of 25 acres afford ample facilities for the exercise of a school of 500.

The 21st year begins September 23rd and the 22nd year begins October 1st. The school is open for inspection and visitation at all times. Write for Prospectus to: RICHARD MOTT GIMMER, Ph. D., HEADMASTER

MEUSEL'S HOME RUN RUINS DAVY'S SHAVE

Circuit Clout to Bleachers Cleans Bancroft's Chin in Clubhouse; Emil's Tying Drive Wasted

COOPER EARNED WIN

By EDWIN J. POLLOCK

There have been strange things done by our baseball sons in this city of Penn. Tales of trick hits, home runs that sneaked through rat holes, and drives that stuck high on the wall for no reason at all, are common along the trails of the national pastime, but listen to this one:

Emil Meusel snipped a home run into the left field bleachers yesterday afternoon incidentally sending the strap against the Pirates into extra inning—and the blow took the soap off a young man's face in the clubhouse.

Irish slammed the ball on the nose and the Irishman, Davy Bancroft, whiskered in the clubhouse. The Co. varth shortstopper dashed to the dressing room after the Pirate portion of the ninth. It looked as if the Palls had as much chance to tie that ball game as the Cards have of copping the flag. Davy started to prepare for a clean shave, and an early getaway. His face was lathered to a creamy white when he heard the howl of the wolves in the bleachers. He took a peep out of the window and saw Irish Meusel trotting leisurely around the bases.

When the Palls took the field at the start of the tenth, there was a shout for Davy. Then Bancroft came sprinting out of the clubhouse and back to his regular post. His face was clean, but the whiskers remained.

IT WAS all for naught that our Palls ventured on for thirteen innings—and Meusel's terrific slam to the bleachers served only to give pitchers time to get cold. The Palls did their best to turn the wallop into something worth while, but a certain Carson Biglow interposed. Biglow's interference came in the form of a hit over the right field wall in the thirtieth.

If ever a pitcher deserved a triumph it was Wilbur Cooper, the young man who ties them with his left hand with Hugo Bezdek, Barney Dreyfus and other Pittsburgh persons. Up to the ninth inning he had allowed our Palls only two bingles. Lem Blackburne started the ninth with a scow to son for a loss, but no one thought anything of that. Then along came Meusel with his homer and the scribbles on their box scores prematurely started.

Once the entire stretch of thirteen frames Cooper allowed only five hits, and the ninth he was not touched until the last Palls chance, when Bancroft slammed a single to left and was left stranded.

GEORGE SMITH, who undertook the job of beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, turned in a fairly good day's work despite the fact that he was beaten. Gaygo was good on spots and bad in spots. His worst spot was the seventh, when the Buccaneers grabbed their first run.

The former Columbia youth held the Pirates harmless until the seventh, when three hits in a row dropped him temporarily. With one down, Terry started, Clavay "Cowboy" got in some extra work out in right when he made believe he could snare Schmidt's liner and thus held Terry wavering between first and second. The ball hit the fence and Terry reached third only by the fastest kind of scuffling.

Then Cooper came to bat and he rapped a wicked one over Blackburne's head for the single that drove in the first run of the pastime. All was serene then for the Pirates and Cooper until Meusel broke into the proceedings with his home run hit.
