

And So They Were Married

START THIS STORY TODAY
TO JANE the loss of her husband meant only release from him forever. She did not stop to think whether she ought to rejoice as she did or not, she was simply glad like a child, to be free. To the fact that life stretched ahead indefinitely and that hard work and the care of little Joy would doubtless be her lot forever, she gave no thought at all.

Jane was no fool, she was not as artless as she seemed. In a way it was somewhat of a pose with her, and when she saw that people liked it she intensified it all she could. She generally used her most artless manner when she wanted to impress people most. She loved to hear people say that she was such a joyous child, and that her life had been so sad. Jane was not like some girls who would have shuddered away from the memory of such an experience as she had had, she enjoyed too much being petted and pitted.

All this does not mean that Jane was an adventuresome, she was nothing of the kind. She was really a child, precocious beyond her years. Jane grew to learn that little Joy served her purpose, too, in the scheme of things. When it was noised about that there was a baby to support people always wanted to do more and Jane loved being fussed over. In her heart of hearts she made no more sacrifice for Joy than was absolutely necessary. She did not do any more than she could help, in spite of the fact that she loved the child dearly. There are some mothers who are fanatical in regard to their children, they sacrifice because they deem it a privilege, they love to martyr themselves, they love to tell people that it is necessary to do without things so that John and Mary can have them. Every one knows that type of mother. But Jane was not essentially the mother type. She loved Joy dearly, but she thought taking care of her a nuisance.

After Helen and Ruth had left her that night she felt to thinking about what Helen had said, and she felt vaguely indignant that Helen should have spoken to her that way before Ruth. Jane knew that she had impressed Ruth and she wanted to go on doing so. Joy was lying warm and cozy in the clean bed which Helen had made up so carefully, and now Jane looked around the disordered room. A perfect passion of work suddenly seized her and she flew around humming to herself, and did more work than she had done in weeks. When she was finished she went to bed tired and happy, with not a thing on her mind. For a few days she made a perfect struggle to keep up to a certain standard, and she got up an hour earlier every morning to bathe Joy and to dress herself with the assurance that everything was all right. Then she slumped again. She overslept one morning, and needed every minute of her time to get down to work. That day Joy received only a hasty mopping from a washcloth and was hustled into a pair of rompers without any ceremony. When Mrs. Maps came upstairs to see if the baby was all right, she found a rather disgustingly dirty room. Jane's clothes as well as Jane's thrown all over the chairs and bed.

At the office Jane was conscious that she was badly slung together. Two hooks were off her skirt and her waist was badly soiled around the cuffs. The immaculate cleanness of Miss Jones, one of the stenographers, shamed her carelessness. "But then," Jane reflected, "Miss Jones is the type that must look that way."

Nevertheless that did not prevent Jane from feeling horribly humiliated and very angry when she overheard a conversation between Miss Jones and one of the proofreaders. "You'd think, wouldn't you," said the proofreader, a sallow, unhealthy looking girl with a mean disposition, "that Mrs. Knowles would take better care of her appearance?" Miss Jones was a peaceable girl who did not like to gossip, and she made an evasive reply. Jane's cheeks burned.

"I wouldn't speak of it at all if it weren't so noticeable," persisted the other girl, "but it doesn't speak very well for the office force. Even her finger nails are dirty."

Jane's anger leaped up and she saw

The Economy of Crepe de Chine
A Daily Fashion Talk by Florence Rose

It is a mistake to believe exquisitely dainty silk underwear is only for the woman of means. Because of its durability and laundering possibilities it is really an economy.

A VERY usual conjecture is that the dainty crepe de chine and georgette underthings that you see displayed temptingly in shop windows are appropriate and possible only for the woman with a very large dress allowance. The woman who does not wear that sort of lingerie usually feels convinced that it would be the height of extravagance to indulge in it. But that is where she is mistaken, for those very things are really an economy.

These exquisitely dainty garments of red. It was only by a violent effort of will that she managed to restrain herself. How dared this girl, this cheap copyreeder, criticize her, how dare she? But underneath this resentment was the vague shame that through her own carelessness she had made such a thing possible. The humiliation followed Jane about all that day, and she surreptitiously stole into the rest room and remedied some of the noticeable points in her lack of grooming.

(Tomorrow, Romance knocks at Jane's door.)

Adventures With a Purse

DID you know that bracelets are coming in again? Not, however, the gold bands and bangles you probably are thinking of. One shopkeeper has just returned from Paris, and back comes the report of queer, Oriental-looking bracelets of large beads, made at a famous and well-known pottery. One, for instance, consists of pale pink beads, quite large and round, strung on an elastic cord which enables you to wear it at whatever distance from your hand you prefer. A few of these bracelets are priced at $1. I am sure you will be interested in seeing them.

The chains I saw today look handmade and are lovely. They consist of tiny beads in gold or silver, with larger beads strung among them at intervals. One, for instance, has tiny gold beads requiring at least two dozen to make an inch, and then every here and there you will find a glowing yellow bead. Another has small silver beads, looking like the little steel ones with which we used to make beaded bags. And here and there among these you will see a large bead of pale pink. Those I saw were priced at $2.50.

WANAMAKER'S DOWN STAIRS STORE WANAMAKER'S

Specials for Men, Women, Children and the Home in Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store

A Busy Little Clearaway of Women's Coats, Capes and Dolmans at $2.50 to $11.50

Low prices will send this little lot flying! Every wrap was originally two or three times as much. The materials are satin, serge, taffeta, velour, velveteen, sweater cloth and linen; the styles are widely assorted, as there are but two or three wraps of a kind. They start at $2.50 for a linen duster and go upward gradually.

The Best Waists for Girls Going Away to School and College are these simple ones of white batiste. They launder better than any other kind and have a fresh simplicity that is most appropriate for school wear.

Inserts of heavy linene form a pretty contrast in these sheer blouses; others have high necks and closely tucked bosoms. Pique collars of excellent cut are used on many of these waists. A point that will appeal to particular young women is the comfortable fit of the sleeves and shoulders of these batiste waists. Wrists are small and close fitting, too.

Sizes 34 to 46 are here at $2.50 to $3.75.

Most Important at This Season of the Year is a new hat. Summer suns and the rains and fogs of seashore vacations have taken all the smartness from the hats of Summer, making the new velvets and satins of Autumn doubly welcome. Delightful hats are hurrying into the Down Stairs Millinery Salon, showing us that Winter is going to be something to look forward to.

Prices start at $5.

Much of Paris Charm and Smartness Is Revealed in Autumn's Newest Frocks

Serge, satin and combinations of satin and Georgette crepe show more models than do any other materials. Lines are mostly long, slender though loose, and belts are narrow. A recent cable from Paris tells us that these are the prevailing modes there.

A Model Here and There From Many New Styles

The afternoon dress of satin and Georgette crepe that is sketched in black or navy blue. The skirt is of satin and the overskirt is of Georgette with interesting satin bands. The bodice is of satin and the sleeves of Georgette. Charming combination, isn't it? $25.

Long, Well Tailored Lines

have a trim smartness that no others have, and are at their best in fine serge such as forms the dress at $29.50 that is sketched.

Notice the ten flaps on the front panel, the attractive Indian beading on the narrow belt, the rows of covered buttons, and the interesting vest that is of Georgette crepe. Doesn't the ensemble bespeak Paris? In black or navy blue.

A Froth of Lace and a Touch of Ribbon

at the throat has ever been famed in song, poetry and story, and women, themselves, know that it enhances and softens their beauty.

One of the new satin dresses possesses just such a neck, with a frill of lace and a touch of picot-edged ribbon. It has wide sleeves a little longer than ¾, and an attractive overskirt. Twilled silk, like fringe (only caught at both ends) is the only other trimming. $39.50.

Special at $3

A gabardine skirt with unusual pockets is gathered all around, yet its lines have the approved slenderness. This will be appropriate for September week-ends at the shore.

A Sale of 1100 Men's Shirts at $1.15

Many, many kinds of shirts are in this excellent collection of good Wanamaker shirts. You can choose from

- madras with woven or printed stripes;
- striped percales in many patterns;
- plain color mercerized materials;
- plain white shirts;
- shirts with soft or stiff cuffs.

All are well-made shirts taken from our regular stock and reduced because sizes are incomplete.

Sizes range from 13½ to 18, with an especially good selection in size 16 and upward, for big men. Of course, not all sizes in every style.

$1.20 is the minimum saving.

Men's and Boys' Golf Caps at $1

Are About Half Usual Price

—That is because they are made from ends of cloth left from men's fine suitings, but they look every bit as well as if they had been made from cloth cut just for caps. There are any number of attractive mixtures.

(Gallery, Market)

Boys' Corduroy Norfolks $9.75

The unequal durability of corduroy has made it the favorite material for all-around school and play suits and, added to that, it keeps its good looks for a surprisingly long while. The corduroy Norfolk suits are made with plain backs, belts all around and lined knickers. And, of course, they are in natural color.

Sizes 7 to 16 years.
