A SPANISH POTROAST FOR SUNDAY; MRS. WILSON GIVES THE RECIPE

This Week's Market Basket Provides for Other Savory Dishes, Too—Fried Butterfish for Breakfast and Tomatoes With Cream Gravy for Supper.

Menu for All Day

By MRS. M. A. WILSON

Listen, Busy Mothers

TODAY and tomorrow will be the last opportunity for busy mothers in certain sections of the city to see the particular cooking movies that have been shown in their neighborhoods this week.

LEBANON CRUMB CAKE (Six servings for twenty cents) Friday and Saturday—The Alhambra, Twelfth and Morris streets.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE (Six for a quarter) Friday and Saturday—Fairmount, Twenty-sixth street and Girard avenue.

QUEEN VICTORIA SPONGE CAKE Friday and Saturday—Point Breeze, 1618 Point Breeze avenue.

Apple Cake Place in a mixing bowl One cup of flour, One-quarter teaspoon of salt, Two teaspoons of baking powder, Two tablespoons of sugar.

Start the meat cooking on a large burner and when well heated transfer to the simmering burner, where it will cook very slowly.

This may also be made a true economy, for Saturday evening dinner may be had from the meat and then it can be served with another garnish and gravy for Sunday, and then the family will surely enjoy it, and when it is cut cold for lunch it will be palatable and well flavored.

A SUGGESTIVE MENU FOR SUNDAY Breakfast Grapes Cereal and Cream Fried Butterfish, Creole Hashed Brown Potatoes Watercress Rolls Coffee

Dinner Grape-Juice Cocktail Potroast Beef, Spanish Browned Potatoes String Beans Tomato Salad Apple Cake Coffee Supper Fried Tomatoes Cream Gravy Potato Salad Corn Bread Apple Sauce Tea

The market basket will require Two pounds of grapes, One and one-half pounds of fish, One-quarter peck of potatoes, Five pounds of potroast, One quart of string beans, One quart of tomatoes, One head of salad, Four green peppers, One quart of onions, One-quarter peck apples and the various staples that are in the house. Butterfish, Creole Cleanse the fish and wash well and then drain. Now roll lightly in flour and brown in hot fat quickly. Place in a baking dish and add the following sauce:

One cup of stewed tomatoes, Four onions, chopped fine, One teaspoon of salt, One teaspoon of paprika, One-half teaspoon of thyme.

Bake in the oven for twenty minutes and then serve from the dish. Other fish may be used in place of the butter fish.

Grape-Juice Cocktail Place one pound of grapes in a saucepan and add three cups of water. Bring to a boil and cook until soft. Rub through a fine sieve and then sweeten and chill. Fill into cocktail glasses and serve.

Potroast Beef, Spanish Place in a mixing bowl and chop fine Two tomatoes, Four onions, Three green peppers, Four branches of parsley.

Now add One teaspoon of paprika. Mix and pack into the meat, pushing well into the roll. Roll the meat in flour and then melt the suet in a deep saucepan and add the meat. Brown well and add one-half cup of flour. Stir until well browned and add one quart of boiling water.

Cook closely and then cook, allowing one-half hour for each pound of meat weight. One hour before add six small onions and cut in quarters. Add to serve add one quart suet for season to taste.

THE SEALS KIN COAT WITH BEAVER BANDS

Furriers are turning out bewitching sealskin coats. The one shown in the sketch is combined with beaver.

A Daily Fashion Talk by Florence Rose SEALS KIN COAT was once more a thing simply a coat made of the pelt of a certain aquatic mammal.

It was admired because the one who wore it knew that the one who bought it had had many shakels to spend, and the one who wore it had been of sufficient attraction to make that purchase seem worth while.

In the small town or village one rather naturally divided the women folk into two classes—those who had sealskin coats and those who did not. There was a social distinction about it.

It was not the garment of the sophisticated young woman nor was it the sort of thing that needed to be in the wardrobe. If you had one you wore it for many seasons just as it was.

But nowadays the sealskin coat is rather different; in fact, it has become a fur particularly beloved by the younger woman, and the skillful furriers have managed to produce coats of this pelt that are not in the latest and most bewitching lines.

In the sketch shown here you will see the new idea of treating sealskin. It is lavishly combined with beaver, which forms a huge collar and cuffs and a band on the cuffs.

This band is very generous, because the coat itself has a ripple back of ample dimensions. It is belted at the front.

The toque is made of a crown of the sealskin combined with a narrow trim of beaver-colored duvetya. There is a pink velvet rose at the center front of the hat.

Please Tell Me What to Do

By CYNTHIA

To the Worried One Why don't you actually call your father's attention to how the business has fallen off? Perhaps that would convince him that he ought not to take so many strangers into his confidence.

Husband Is Right Dear Cynthia—I am just twenty-one though I have been married going on three years. I have a baby girl six months old. Now Cynthia, what I would like to ask you is this. My husband wants me to live on a certain amount a week—that is not counting the rent. I say he should give me his envelope and trust me to save. What he doesn't give me to live on he makes good use of. Am I right? I would also like your readers' advice.

Another Answer to Margaret Dear Cynthia—In Monday's EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, I saw a letter signed "Margaret" in which she asked what your readers would think of a young girl who would marry a divorced man. May I tell "Margaret" a little of what I have endured since I decided to do what her friend is contemplating?

I was twenty-one years of age and I met a young man who after several talks with me concluded to me that he was divorced from his wife, because she had left him and had finally married another man. He talked very well and described how he had loved her and surrounded her with every comfort, but how badly she had treated him. My heart went out to him in sympathy.

My mother learned that he was divorced and warned me not to encourage his attentions, but I would not listen and finally I married him, though my dear friend whom I had known from childhood, our Episcopal minister, begged me not to do and refused to marry us. Well, we were married four years ago and for the first few months, though I was happy with him, I suffered terribly from the sneers and slights I encountered from my old friends.

Not one of the girls I had grown up with came to see me, and when we met in the street they hurried by. This was especially noticeable in one I had greatly loved. One day I stopped her in the street and asked her what I had done to be treated so. And she said "Why, Mary, you married a man whose wife is still living." "But they were divorced," I cried. "Oh, yes," she said, "but I don't approve of remarriage after divorce," and went on. This cut me to the heart and a little later I found that my husband was not so attentive nor so kind, and now after four years of life with him, I had I can scarcely stand it any longer.

He is treating me as I have since learned he treated his first wife. I will not go into details, it would be too humiliating and I have lost my friends. I hope this letter may help to stop "Margaret's" friends from taking the same step.

The Man Who Orders Four Kinds of Fruit, American Plan, and "Kicks" About It Apt to Eat Prunes at Home

THE restaurant was crowded. It was the high tide of the dinner hour at a large resort hotel—a time when every waiter must keep his wits to make only a minimum of mistakes.

"I am sorry, madam," this one was saying, "but I'll bring them just as soon as I go back to the kitchen."

But the lady who had ordered mashed potatoes and candied sweets as well from the "all-you-want-to-eat" menu would not be pacified.

"I knew," she remarked to her husband, but loud enough for the waiter to hear, "he wasn't listening to a thing you were saying when you gave that order. You'd think they'd hire waiters with brains in a place like this, the price they charge for meals."

Perhaps it was the waiter's fault and perhaps it wasn't, humbly speaking. But there is this to be remarked about women and men who are the least tolerant of slip-ups when away from their own homes—they are usually the ones most accustomed to unsmooth sailing when they are in them.

The woman who phones downstairs to report the maid who failed to put clean towels in her room in the evening is more often than not the woman whose bathroom at home is always littered with half-soiled towels and gray-looking washcloths.

The man who orders four kinds of fruit for his breakfast simply because he finds them on the American plan menu, and then complains about them at that, is usually the chap who sits calmly at home at 8 o'clock every morning eating a dish of prunes!

THE situation works in the reverse as well. We are prone to abuse furniture in hotels, on boats, trains, etc., when we would not dream of treating our own at home in the same fashion.

The child whose hands are slapped for putting his fingers on the polished piano in his own home is placidly allowed to carve his name finger nail fashion on the one in the hotel parlor, if that kind of amusement strikes his fancy.

And lighted cigarettes are ruthlessly thrown on expensive rugs met in traveling, and the simple little one at home is treated with the highest respect.

Sometimes a person wonders if there is such a thing as a sense of respect for other people's property!

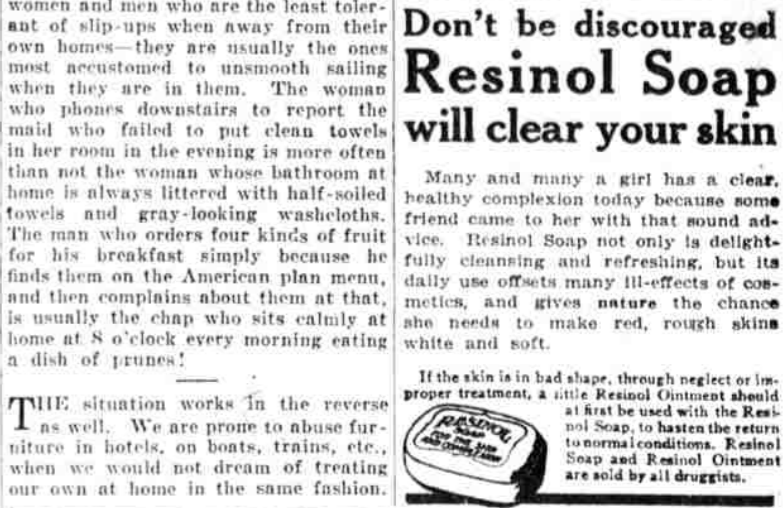

Don't be discouraged Resinol Soap will clear your skin

Many and many a girl has a clear healthy complexion today because some friend came to her with that sound advice. Resinol Soap not only is delightfully cleansing and refreshing, but its daily use offsets many ill-effects of cosmetics, and gives nature the chance she needs to make red, rough skin white and soft.

If the skin is in bad shape, through neglect or improper treatment, a little Resinol Ointment applied at first be used with the Resinol Soap, to hasten the return to normal conditions. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists.
