AUNT CINDY, the famous old cook of the lieutenant governor of Mississippi, proudly arrayed in her blue calico gown and a white apron of generous proportions around her generous waist, with a handkerchief tied tightly around her head, tignon fashion, filled the doorway of the lieutenant governor's very fine table, and while Aunt Cindy's husband, Uncle Jobe, is the chief factotum, nevertheless Aunt Cindy proudly claims the honors.

She has, by her own genius for cooking, evolved dishes that have made the lieutenant governor's home famous for its entertainment. As is the custom of the South, Aunt Cindy says, "Yass'm; Ah sutt'nly has ter step some. Folk ter kinda feel powerful inclined to visit, so natcherly Aunt Cindy has ter provide fur 'em."

Aunt Cindy's Famous Pig-Head Loaf
Have the butcher split a medium-sized pig head and then singe and wash well to cleanse. Place in a kettle and add four quarts of cold water. Add the following spice tied in a piece of cheesecloth:

- Two onions, chopped fine.
One stalk of celery, chopped fine.
Four branches of parsley, chopped fine.
One tablespoon of powdered thyme.
One tablespoon of sweet woodruff, powdered.
One-half teaspoon of powdered sage.

Bring to a boil and cook slowly for three hours, or until the meat will leave the bones. Now place a colander in a deep bowl and turn in the head. Cool and then remove all bones. Place the meat in a chopping bowl and mince fine. Return the stock to the kettle and boil to reduce. Add four cups of this stock and the grated rind and juice of one lemon. Also:

- Two teaspoons of salt.
One teaspoon of paprika.
And the meat from the head.
Now rinse the loaf-shaped pans with cold water and pour in the mixture. Set aside to cool and mold. Now pour the leftover stock in a bowl and let cool. When ready to serve cut the loaf in thin slices and lay on a large platter, covered with crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with the jellied leftover stock, chopped fine. Dust with paprika and serve.

- Mulligatawny Soup
Three pints of chicken stock.
One pint of water.
One-half eggplant, chopped fine.
Two apples, grated.
Three onions, grated.
Two green peppers, minced fine.
Juice of one lemon.
One and one-half teaspoons of salt.

My dear Mrs. Wilson—Please let me know if there is any way whereby I can bottle the juice of lemons for future use? H. G. C.

To preserve lemon juice squeeze or cream out juice from lemons and strain through cheesecloth. Add one cup sugar to each quart of juice, stir and heat to dissolve sugar. Fill into sterilized bottles, cork and place in hot-water bath process thirty-five minutes, cork, dip top in melted paraffin, and store in a cool place.

To Keep Wedding Dress
To the Editor of Woman's Page:
Dear Madam—Will you please tell me how to pack away a bridal veil and white satin wedding dress? I would like very much to save mine for my daughter and I am afraid of moth.

MRS. G. H.
Stuff the sleeves of the dress with tissue paper and wherever there is a flat fold in the dress put pads of tissue paper to prevent any creases. Then take a cotton or linen sheet dipped in indigo (thoroughly dried, of course) and wrap this around the dress. Roll the veil on a long, wide piece of pliable cardboard such as is used for rolling centerpieces. The object of this is to put as few creases in it as possible. Moths are not apt to get to lace or satin that is perfectly clean. However, as a safeguard you might wrap all of this in newspaper and put in a cedar chest if you have one.

To Friendless
After thoroughly putting the head through treatments with fishberries and alcohol, which you can get in a drug store, saturate it with vinegar, wrapping a turkish towel around it so that the treatment will be effective. Repeat this process several times, all the while working faithfully with a fine tooth comb. The condition you speak of will clear. The vinegar is what removes these last traces.

I am sorry not to be able to name a specialist for you through the column, but one of our very few rules forbids this. You can, however, get the name of a skin specialist from any one of the clinics at the hospitals, or you can go to a reliable hair dresser, who gives scalp treatment. There are clinics at minutes and then spread over the fish and serve.

Just a Pig's Head and Set of Feet
Have the butcher split the head and then cleanse, removing the brain and tongue. Discard the eyes. Then wash in plenty of cold water and cleanse thoroughly. Crack the feet open. Place the head, feet and tongue in a large preserving kettle and cover with cold water and add:

- One and one-half cups of sliced onions.
Two carrots, cut in dice.
One and one-half cups of dried celery leaves.
One-half ounce of celery seed.
One-half ounce of mustard seed.
One tablespoon of thyme.
One tablespoon of sage.
One tablespoon of sweet woodruff.
One dozen whole allspice.
One bunch of pot herbs.

Bring to a boil and skim frequently and cook until the meat on the head and feet is tender. Remove the head, feet and tongue and boil the liquid for ten minutes to reduce. Strain and then measure. To two and one-half quarts of this stock add:

- One tablespoon of black pepper.
Three tablespoons of salt.
Two cups of oatmeal.
Three cups of cornmeal.
One cup of whole-wheat flour.

And then meat, chopped fine from the set of pig's feet. Cook slowly, stirring frequently. Cook until very thick, like mush, on the back part of the range, and then rinse a square loaf-shaped pan with cold water. Pour in the scrapple and then place the balance of the stock, three pints, in a preserving kettle, and add one cup of vinegar. Bring to a boil and cook for fifteen minutes to reduce. Add the meat, removed from the head and cut into neat pieces. Rinse a loaf-shaped pan with cold water, and then pour in the mince. Set in a cool place to mold.

The scrapple may be formed into croquettes and dipped in flour and fried until golden brown, or it may be cut into thin slices and fried in the usual manner. Cut the head cheese into slices and served with mustard sauce.

Cook the brains for breakfast or luncheon.

Braised Brains
Remove loose tissue, wash and place on pan of warm water, containing two tablespoons of lemon juice or vinegar, and let soak one hour. Parboil. Now:

- Mince five six strips of bacon.
Brown nicely.
Add brains, cut in pieces. When well browned add:
Four tablespoons flour.
Add:
One chopped onion.
One cup water.

Bring to boil. Cook five minutes and serve.

PLAN OBEDIENCE CONTEST
North Philadelphia Mothers to Have "Show Down" on Issue

A "show-down" is at hand for North Philadelphia mothers who brag about how obedient their children are.

An obedience contest will be one of the chief features of a street carnival that will open tomorrow night on Seventeenth street between Butler and Pike.

At a signal from the referee, each mother who risks contesting will issue an order of some kind to her offspring, boy or girl. Watch in hand, the referee will time the youngster to see how quickly he or she obeys.

The child of course, will not know it is being put to a test.

Prizes will be awarded the most obedient girl and the most obedient boy. The carnival will continue Friday night and Saturday afternoon and night. The proceeds will go to a $50,000 fund to build a swimming pool at the Nicetown Boys' Club as a memorial to North Philadelphians who gave their lives in the world war.

Proper to Walk With Boy
Dear Cynthia—I have read your column for quite a while and am very much interested in it. I have read the grand advice you give and would like you to please help me.

Is it proper for a girl of my age to allow a boy, six or seven years younger than myself, to escort me home from school at noon and at 3:30? I was formally introduced to him at a Scout party in February, and every day last term after that he waited for me outside of school and walked home with me.

My mother doesn't exactly object, but she's afraid people might talk. This boy is a perfect little gentleman. He is very quiet and generally talks with his mother. I wish to know this before school started again, so I could do the right thing and not spoil my good reputation.

Could you also tell me is it proper for me to dance with boys a year or more older than myself? I love to dance and I have taught nearly all my girl friends how.

ALMOST FOURTEEN.
If the little boy lives in the same direction there is no reason why he should not walk home with a little girl of your age. But it would be wiser not to walk with him every day. Tell him nicely that you think he had better go with the boys sometimes. There is nothing improper in walking with him, but it is a mistake to do so all the time.

Of course, dance with boys older than yourself.

New Cure for H. C. of L.
Dear Cynthia—We are four good friends and we love each other, and on account of the high cost of living we would like to get married. We are strangers in Philadelphia and we do not know many girls, so we are asking you to tell us what to do. We have just been discharged from the army. We are leaving this matter to you.

The city clerk's office from eight to ten every three years of age. Please answer soon as you can.

DONALD SMITH AND FRIENDS.
Although I cannot introduce you to the fair girls of whom you dream, you wish to marry on account of the high cost of living. That's a novel idea. I would like to hear you work it out.

Walk After Theatre
Dear Cynthia—Kindly let me know whether it is proper for three young ladies ranging between the ages of nineteen and twenty-two to take a walk at night on Chestnut street after having been in to see one of the shows, and whether girls seen like this are condemned?

Why Is It, Boys?
Dear Cynthia—Can you tell me why it is, dear Cynthia, that most boys seem to prefer the painted dolls? Why it is that the more freakish a girl looks the more she is desired by the opposite sex?

I noticed a discussion in your paper about the kind of girls men like, and I also noticed that some boys wrote back in their defense and said that they did not like the painted doll, but a good, sensible girl, but where, oh, where are such boys to be found? It seems to me that unless a girl's clothes are the very latest in style the boys won't even bother to look at her. They do not realize that it costs money to be dressed like a fashion plate.

Now, please don't think, Cynthia, that I am an old maid, for I am not. I am nineteen years of age, and I like pretty clothes and nice times as much as any other young girl. I am employed in an office in the daytime and go on to dances and parties in the evenings. But I never always find that the very

A Gripping New Serial for the Woman's Page

EVERY day in the year all over the world men are protesting their love for women. How much of it is the kind that really lasts? Julia Grant was engaged to be married and her wedding day was drawing near when she discovered the golden thing that had been offered her was nothing but tawdry brass. Her fiance was already in love with another woman! What can a girl do in a case like this? What particular one did do forms the basis of a gripping new serial.

'The Testing of Julia Grant' written by Hazel Deyo Batchelor and shortly to appear on the Woman's Page. Some of the scenes are laid in the hospital where Julia Grant goes to take up training. Then fate steps in. What follows is more than a story. It is a vivid, dramatic cross-section of life that strips bare the lives of four real men and women. Fate does amazing things in reality, but read the story and see for yourself.

Watch for It

first time a boy takes a girl home he expects the girl to allow him to kiss her, and if she doesn't that is the last she will see of him.

But perhaps I have been unfortunate in the boys I have met and there are still some boys who know how to respect a decent girl. I sincerely hope so.

A BUSINESS GIRL.
Southern—My dear, what greatly surprises me is that so many of you young people think so lightly of getting a divorce. It seems to me if you would remember always that you take each other for better or worse, perhaps you would both put up a little better with the worse.

You can be protected against ill treatment from your husband by going to the Domestic Relations Court and stating your case there. This would not mean even as much publicity as a divorce would. Divorce is not a cure; the thing is to avoid the things which make even the thought of divorce possible.

The fact that your husband is willing to let you get a divorce on any grounds and will even pay the costs shows that he is anxious to be relieved of his vows, not that he loves you. Do not get a divorce if it can possibly be avoided. Very often a good cure for abuse is to give the one who abuses a dose of his own medicine. It's very interesting perhaps to knock your wife all around the room, but suppose the wife should return in kind and start knocking you about? Of course, if that sort of thing did not succeed with the one trial it would not do to keep it up, as it would deteriorate into common fighting. But a good, swift return of treatment once would doubtless have its effect.

How to stop dandruff and loss of hair with Resinol

Here is a simple, inexpensive treatment that will almost always stop dandruff and scapitching, and keep the hair thick, lustrous and soft:

At night, spread the hair apart and rub a little Resinol ointment into the scalp gently, with the tip of the finger. Repeat this until the whole scalp has been treated. Next morning, shampoo thoroughly with Resinol Soap and hot water. Work the creamy Resinol lather well into the scalp. Rinse with gradually cooler water, the last water being cold.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment easily heal eczema and similar skin eruptions. Sold by all drug stores.

THE WOMAN ON THE CAR WHO PLAYS "SOLITAIRE"

She Sits Sidewise in Rush Hours as Though Life Were a Game Without Neighbors

THE man who said life was best played as a game of solitaire ought to have been sentenced to sit next to this particular lady on the trolley car. He would have had the keen pleasure of acting as foil between some ten people on the other side of him desperately pushing up for more room and herself, The Person-Who-Would-Not-Move.

Ever meet her? She is the woman who sits sidewise, utterly defying the axiom that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points and on the whole taking up as much room as she possibly can on the crowded trolley car.

It is only after I get off the trolley car half crushed to death that I can think of fitting punishment for her. For instance, she might be made to walk up the street just two inches ahead of the person who always carries an umbrella poked under the arm, so it can't, by any possible chance, miss any more than 2 per cent of the passerby. Or then again she might be made to ride all day in an elevator with a person who wants to get off at the eleventh floor, but who rather enjoys standing in the middle of the gate just any one who might want to get off at any of the other floors might do so with ease.

The Linen Blouses
Some of the new linen blouses for sport wear are extremely mannish and tailored type, with link cuffs and breast pockets. Others—fresh from Paris—go to the extremes of alluring femininity. They have elbow sleeves and no collars at all, and they are cut kimono fashion—with no arm seams—falling as straight from the shoulders as a chemise. They come just below the hip and a broad, soft sash is knotted around the waistline to give just the suggestion of a fit.

THEN again there's powdering her nose. Suppose some day she was in a fearful hurry to make herself presentable before getting an esteemed one on the 3:34. We would condemn her to rush confidently into the waiting room at the railroad station only to find some one there ahead of her. Only one who would give her right eye before she would donate an inch of mirror space to a friend in need of a powdered nose in a hurry.

I would condemn our friend to remain in a stuffy room with ten other persons in it as well as herself wanting the window open. It would stay closed for the sake of one conscientious objector to fresh air!

These and fifteen million other similar punishments I would visit on the thoughtless woman!
