

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Sees Mrs. Warden Entertaining Convalescent Sailors at the Polo on Thursday—Dance Last Night at Rush Home

YOU ought to have been out at the polo on Thursday to see the wonderful party Mrs. William G. Warden gave to 150 convalescent sailors. She took them out to the game and had them returned home afterward. They had a beautiful time and Mrs. Warden asked quite a number of her friends to help entertain them. Agnes Brockie Mason was with her mother and so was Elizabeth. Agnes certainly looks as if matrimony agreed with her, she seems as happy as the day is long. Did you hear if she ever found her jewelry? I asked a great friend of hers the other day, and she said she thought not. Wasn't it too bad.

WELL, the women of the Main Line are back in harness all right, are they not? Did you hear that they are to have a campaign starting October 8 and lasting ten days to raise money to build, equip and maintain a maternity ward in connection with the Bryn Mawr Hospital? Mrs. Samuel Vaulain has given the grounds for the ward and now the money for the building, etc., remains to be collected. The campaign will be co-operative with the Bryn Mawr Horse Show and carnival, which is to give its proceeds entirely to the hospital.

Mrs. Paul Deneka Mills is head of the new ward campaign. You remember she had the Liberty Loans in the central part of the city under her care last year, and in fact in every drive I think, and she certainly proved her ability then. Mrs. Shippen Willing, Edith Rawle that was Mrs. George Packard, Mrs. George C. Thayer, Mrs. Charlie Sinnickson and Mrs. Edgar C. Felton. Then they have a publicity committee, too, which has Mrs. Henry Earnshaw as chairman and Mrs. Archibald Hill, Mrs. W. G. Alexander Brown will be associated with her.

I am looking forward to that Horse Show in Bryn Mawr. I always love it out there, the grounds and surrounding country add so much to the beauty of things generally. The grand stand has those smart green and white striped awnings, and then the clubhouse is so attractive. The show starts on October 8 if no change has been made.

DID I tell you who won the prizes for the lucky-number dance at the party out at the Tom Doherty on Wednesday of this week? Jane Mauls and Bill Townsend won the first prize, and the second was given to Anita Evans and Harry Graham. Every one was there, and the affair was a decided success. It is home for the Children's Hospital, you know. And they had the cutest baby out there from the hospital to show all those interested what could be done for a little sick baby. This youngster had been taken to the hospital a year ago really half dead from lack of proper nourishment. It was we and scavenging and could not die, which it did not. Well, they took it in and nursed it tenderly and carefully, and it is simply a little wonder now. I thought it quite an idea that they had "the goods" on exhibit. And said we goods was just as cute as cute could be.

ABOUT thirty of the school set had a fine time last night at the dinner-dance which the Benjamin Kishes gave for their son Richard out at Chester, France Mills, the two Montgomery girls, Louise Thomson, Polly Newlin, Christine Frazier, Ben Frazier, Catherine Rogers, Frances Sloan, Jimmie Sinker, Alexander and Crosby Brown, George Packard, Jr., George Thayer, Jr., Henry Jones, City School, Mrs. Charlie Barclay, Mrs. B. B. Strawbridge and Billy Ashton were among the boys and girls at the party. Most of these girls go to boarding school, and are only here for the Christmas and Easter holiday parties. They will be of the debutante class in three or four more years.

I WAS surprised to hear yesterday that the Duke and Duchess of Roxburgh and the Countess of Granard are on the water already on their way back to England. Many New Yorkers had hoped that they would remain here in part of the winter's season at least. In fact, some Philadelphians thought perhaps they might come on here and visit the Craig Hiddles, who entertained for them in Newport, you remember. But whatever they thought, the fact remains they are now on the high seas, and though some say they will return, we, I greatly doubt it.

VIEWS OF EX-SERVICE MEN ON MARRIAGE ARE VARIED

Red Cross Workers Here Find Some "Ain't Crazy," Others Are "Not So Fortunate" or Have Not "Asked Her Yet"

Are you married? It is really a very simple question, but it has called forth a wide variety of answers from former service men who appeal to the home service department of Red Cross for aid of one sort or another. It is one of the first questions asked by Red Cross workers.

"No," answered one former soldier rather vehemently. "I look worried, but it's because I haven't a job."

And the next man questioned said: "No, I'm not married, for which I'm sorry. But we can't all be lucky."

The next man, in reply to the question, said "No, mon, I got picked out, but I ain't asked her yet."

Some pleaded "not guilty"; some said they still had hope. One said, "No, I ain't crazy yet," and another said, "No, I'm not so fortunate."

Some proved they were married by bringing the "betwixt salt" along, and others explained they were having difficulty taking care of themselves without any added circumstances.

150 Cases Handled Daily

Where a few months ago the halls of the home service department, 1607 Walnut street, were crowded with mothers and wives seeking information about their boys or more practical assistance, there are now former service men waiting their turn for interviews.

They want to know about their allowances; about train fare to their homes; about vocational training; or perhaps they want a suit of civilian clothes. An average of 150 cases a day are taken care of at the department headquarters.

A fifteen-year-old world war veteran appealed to the department recently for a suit of "civics." There were tears in his eyes as he pointed to his worn and faded khaki and pleaded for "just any kind of plain clothes." The boy enlisted when thirteen years old, giving a fictitious date of birth. He said he was in service nearly two years before his right eye was discovered and he was discharged as " unfit for service."

His mother and father had separated years before and the mother had tried to support three boys by working in a restaurant in St. Paul, Minn. All of the boys ran away and enlisted. They were all under age. The youngest, who was sent back to his mother in St. Paul after he had been provided with "civics."

Couldn't Read Citation

Another soldier came in to have some one translate a French document he had received. The home service worker read the message with a thrill, for it was a citation and told of heroic action under fire.

"Why, you must have received a Croix de Guerre," she exclaimed. "Oh, I guess you mean this," said the soldier, and pulled the emblem from his pocket. He said it didn't mean anything to him—just a trinket.

But when the Red Cross workers read the citation to him, he changed his mind and agreed that it really was quite nice. And he pinned the Croix de Guerre on his coat.

"This department has not been idle a minute this summer," said one of the workers. "But more of our workers are coming every day and the work is being more thoroughly organized to take care of the changing needs. We are trying especially to reach all wounded service men, to help them get their compensation and to obtain vocational training and any other assistance needed."

Mrs. Louis W. Robey is in charge of the information department, and is also directing the legal department, which is growing in importance, as the government requires affidavits to virtually all the information and appeals.

SCIENTISTS REVEAL GREAT NEW ENERGY

U. of P. Professor Substantiates Theory of Sir Oliver Lodge Regarding Atomic Force

Kaiser Bill "pulled a bone" when he didn't first learn how to utilize atomic energy before he started the world war.

In every there is an energy chained up for every particle of matter, in the material, in the molecules, in the atoms, in the paper of our bodies, in the clothes and the food we eat which, if liberated, could liberate world mountains.

If one man knew how to liberate this energy he might sneer at the world and the nations of men, because they would continue to exist only on his sufferance.

Energy is there, But—

If he knew how to liberate this energy slowly, as the energy is liberated from burning coals in the stove, he wouldn't have a competitor in the business, commercial and industrial world able to keep pace with him.

"Please to remember, however," said Dr. Dieran H. Kabakjian, of Pennsylvania, "that there is no danger of anybody learning how to liberate this energy for good, long while. Folks may sleep soundly on, long while. But most certainly the energy is there. It is being liberated slowly, even now, from radium and other radioactive substances."

"If you remember, changes in the state of matter produce energy. Chemical changes, like those in burning coal, produce heat energy. Physical changes, like the falling of a stone, which gathers velocity and liberates energy when it strikes."

"Now, this kind of energy is under the control of man, who knows how to handle it to run his steamboats and his autos and his factories. But there is another type of energy which is enormously greater than the usable energy from all other sources."
