PROFIT SHARING

WE hold no brief for or against a sharing of profits between employer and employee; nor do we believe that because, in the main, profit sharing plans have never been successful, they may not be in the future.

BUT we do hold that no mere increase of payment to employees, whether as wages or profits or both, will be of lasting benefit to them, if they spend all they get.

FOR rise of prices will offset the wage gain precisely to the extent that wages are expended for consumption.

WHY should it be left to the forces of unrest to talk to the wage earner where he is, in language he understands, on subjects he wants to know about.

The strongest foe of lies is truth.

But it must be spoken on the spot.

WHEN the wage earner is a capitalist he will rail less at capital. But his capital must come by acquisition—not by gift.
