

WORLD UPSET IS AIM OF RED LABOR GROUPS

The historical moment! Long before the war it was an axiom of international socialism that if a great world conflict should ever break out it would inevitably be followed by a world revolution.

Inspired by Karl Marx Doctrine

This "theory of catastrophe," as it was termed by its Prussian inventor, Karl Marx, hypnotized the socialist leaders of all European countries during the war and dictated their policy.

Thus the Entente socialists, under the pretext of humanitarianism and pacifism, worked desperately during the last years of the war for a "peace without victors and vanquished," which would have been a German peace spelling desolation, misery and inevitable revolution in their own countries.

Staggered by Allied Victory

It was a staggering blow to the ambition of the western socialists when the war ended, in spite of their subterranean activity, with the great victory of the Allies, instead of gradually foundering, as they had hoped, in a slough of despond and bloodshed in vain.

But for the continuance of the Bolshevik regime in Russia, I believe that the western socialist leaders would have abandoned their exaggerated expectations of revolutionary conquest after the victory of the allied armies and that exhausted Europe would have been spared the excitements of their plots and intrigues.

For it was from Moscow that the "Second International," also, in spite of its transparent attempts at camouflage, today draws the greater part of its strength and inspiration.

To emulate this pair of fortunate adventurers in the secret desire—a natural desire enough when you stop to think about it—of the socialist chiefs of the West, who feel they are wasting their talents in sterile conferences and petty electoral campaigns when they might be dictators more absolute than kings.

Dreams of Bolshevizing World

Visions of the Bolshevik czar in the fabled palace of Nicholas II inspire their impassioned appeals for "social justice" and "the rights of the working classes" and goad them on to the organization of vast strikes plunging humanity into economic chaos.

On the conclusion of the armistice with Germany all the allied socialists vehemently demanded the immediate and simultaneous demobilization of the vast victorious hosts that had vanquished the Hun.

"Ruthless Catastrophe" as Goal

It failed, fortunately, but so long as Lenin thrones it in the Kremlin the chiefs of the "International" will know no rest and will continue unscrupulously to exploit and mislead the toilers of Europe, fascinated by his bewitching example.

To a great degree it is, in fact, due to the protection of the British, French and Italian socialists that Lenin has been able to maintain himself so long.

"We are determined to prevent the murder of the Russian revolution," shouted the French majority socialist Froissard hysterically at the Lucerne conference; and he added, with more honesty than most of his comrades: "We affirm our ardent sympathy with the Russian revolution as represented by Lenin's government."

Leagued With Red High Priest

There can be, in truth, little doubt that the chiefs of the "Second International" are secretly in communication with the high priest of bolshevism, in spite of the fact that he has ostensibly excommunicated them for exaggerated timidity in their dealings with bourgeois society.

The vehement desire of the western socialists to send a "commission of inquiry" into Bolshevik Russia, in order to "establish the real truth about Lenin's rule," is inspired by similar motives, and it is fortunate that the allied governments have so far remained unusually firm in their refusal to allow this embassy, disguised as a "commission," to proceed to the Bolshevik capital.

What today divides the leaders of the "Second International" in London and Paris from the dictators of the "Third International" in Moscow is neither their aspirations nor their methods, but simply the power and opportunity of realizing and applying them as successfully as the Russians, who were favored by the catastrophe that befell their unhappy country.

The attitude of the western socialists toward Germany is dictated by considerations very similar to those which determine their policy toward Bolshevik Russia.

"If the kaiser were to return tomorrow to Berlin and proclaim himself a socialist, the Entente socialist leaders would pretend to believe him."

It suits the occult purposes of the leaders of the "International" to affirm stoutly, in the face of all evidence to the contrary, that Germany is today a genuine "social republic" governed by sincere, idealistic socialists, just as it concords with their plans to insinuate that the proletariat is happy and prosperous under Lenin's government and that all revelations of Bolshevik misrule are malignant inventions of the "capitalist press."

"German Republic" an Asset

The existence of a German "social republic" is an invaluable asset in their campaign of political conquest in the rest of Europe.

"Are you really convinced that Scheidemann is an honest socialist?" I asked Mr. Henderson, the British socialist leader.

"Oh, absolutely," he replied, in tones of deepest conviction and finality.

A Grotesque Comedy

As I have already intimated, it is not primarily pro-Germanism that compels the Entente socialists thus to embrace these tarnished Teutons as brethren; this grotesque comedy is played in order to impress the world with the need of following Germany's "glorious example" and instituting universal socialist government.

There are, of course, some notorious pro-Germans among the sachems of the "International." Ramsay MacDonald, the leader of the English extremists, was long before the war a fervent admirer of William III, whom he innocently believed to be destined to lead the peoples of Europe to a new social paradise.

However, the supreme test of the relations of the Entente socialist leaders with the present Berlin government came at Lucerne, when Herr Hilferding, the delegate of the German Independent Socialists, demanded the exclusion of the German Majority Socialists from the "International" on the ground that they were playing the game of the Prussian militarists and reactionaries and preventing the development of true democracy in Germany.

Herr Hilferding's scathing indictment of Noske and Scheidemann roused some applause, which was immediately suppressed by Mr. Henderson; the president of the conference, with visible irritation; and later, when the Alsatian delegate Grumbach, until recently a German subject, essayed to support Hilferding and thereby called forth brutal interruptions from Herr Weis, the "socialist" military governor of Berlin and Noske's faithful henchman, Mr. Henderson intervened once more, and instead of silencing the interrupter, coolly suppressed Grumbach, calling to the platform Troelstra, who made a long speech in defense of the Berlin rulers. Hilferding's motion to exclude the Majority Socialists was rejected.

Isolated Independents

In consequence, the German Independent Socialists have since decided to remain aloof from the "Second International," and thus these men, who were the real promoters of the German revolution at a time when Scheidemann and his party thought only of saving and serving the kaiser and the Hohenzollerns, are today in complete socialistic isolation.

Truly, the German empire can rely upon the unflinching friendship of the Entente socialists. The "Second International" is its willing instrument, an instrument that will continue to be exploited to the utmost by Germany to transform her defeat into victory.

Germany's Authoritative Voice

On the quay at Lucerne, in front of the Kursaal, the staff of the German legation in Switzerland was daily assembled to receive the reports of the German delegates on the progress of the conference and to instruct them regarding their tactics.

Henceforth, the German government will have its ambassadors and agents, disguised as delegates, attending every socialist congress and sitting in every international socialist committee in Europe, in order to serve the interests of the empire and its rulers, while the Entente delegates will be intent only on the confusion and destruction of their governments.

Germany will have a voice—an authoritative voice—in the councils of Entente labor, and will secretly direct all the intricate maneuvers of the modern proletarian movement; it will be in her power to paralyze by great strikes the industrial prosperity of her vanquishers and thus to exert a decisive influence not only over the political, but also the economic future of Europe.

"Necessity Knows No Law"

The Entente socialists know all this and do not care. Their interests coincide with Germany's interests. They are willing to turn their country's victory into defeat and to accept German domination if by so doing they can satisfy their ambitions.

The spirit of the "International" is an evil spirit. It is a spirit of envy, of hatred, of hypocrisy. It is fundamentally a Prussian spirit, even as Marxism is a Prussian creation; Prussian in its exaltation of discipline and uniformity of the masses to the detriment of individual effort and enterprise; Prussian in its methods of bluff and blackmail, concealing ineffectual cowardice; Prussian, above all, in its overbearing conceit to rule and fashion the world after its own image and utter spiritual and practical incapacity to do so.

Among the chiefs of the "International" there are no statesmen capable of leading Europe out of the chaos into which their advent to power would inevitably plunge it. European socialism has become the paradise of mediocrity; to foster and pamper the inefficient is part of its creed.

The European socialist leaders are but party politicians with narrow vision, absolutely unable to grasp the greater problems of world politics with which the welfare also of the working classes is bound up. And yet they are madly striving to inflame not only all Europe, but also America, and even the Far East, with their spirit of hatred and strife.

Germany Still Seeks to Undermine Britain

It is not for me to defend British rule in India; but to see the British socialists in Lucerne accept without protest the tirades of Hindu conspirators, while their German "comrades" looked complacently on, was an infinitely characteristic revelation, both of the spirit of the "International" and of Germany's success in exploiting it to achieve, in spite of defeat, her great war aim—the destruction of the British empire.

Chinese "Socialists" also, bewailing the wrongs of the "proletariat" of China in Lucerne, alarmingly disclosed the light-hearted opportunism with which the socialists of Europe are attempting to pervert and bewilder nations far beyond the ken of socialism with a doctrine that has never yet been able to "make good" even in the most advanced countries of the West.

Smiling Japanese Comment

On the last day of the Lucerne conference I walked back to my hotel with a little, perpetually smiling secretary of a Japanese legation in Europe. All through the conference he had sat back among the newspaper men listening to the debates and smiling, perpetually smiling the enigmatic smile of his race.

"I must just finish writing my report and then I'm off to Paris," he remarked, in his excellent, choppy English. And then, smiling more enigmatically than ever, he added: "Europe is—yes?—pretty well played out. Socialism, bolshevism—it is all the same—the governments are no more strong enough to stop it. Their soldiers are tired of shooting after the long war. So for a time there will be revolution, anarchy, famine. And then WE shall come and restore order. Our soldiers are not too tired to shoot."

I should like to see his "report."

BRITISH EVACUATING RUSSIA

All French Troops Have Been Recalled, Pichon Says

London, Sept. 27.—The evacuation of North Russia by British troops will be completed within a week, according to the Evening Standard.

Paris, Sept. 27.—Stephen Pichon, foreign minister, in the course of a discussion of provisional credits in the chamber of deputies yesterday, said the government would give out, as soon as the accounts were closed, a statement showing the expenses to France in connection with the Russian expedition.

All French troops have been recalled from European Russia, he said, and only 1200 men remain in Siberia. The repatriation of the Czechoslovak troops in Siberia was yet to be arranged.

M. Pichon said that no credit was extended to Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian government, or to General Denikin. Only supplies taken to Siberia by the French troops had been handed over to Admiral Kolchak, he added.

Commercial relations with Russia were not resumed, M. Pichon said, because the Allies feared any material sent there would fall into the hands of the soviet government.

Train Crew to Be Arrested. Norristown, Pa., Sept. 27.—After a coroner's jury blamed Howard Long, conductor of Norristown, and William Andrews, engineer, of Bridgeport, for the death of Oscar Petzold, of Bridgeport, in a wreck on the Stony Creek branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad last Sunday, warrants were issued for the arrest of the men on the charge of "unlawfully refusing and neglecting to obey the rules and regulations of a transportation company."

N. J. LIQUOR MEN IN ARMS

Will Attempt to Prevent Ratification of Eighteenth Amendment

Atlantic City, Sept. 27.—Four hundred Jersey liquor dealers served notice upon the anti-saloon leagues and other church organizations of the state yesterday in the closing session of their annual convention that they intend to use every means at their disposal to prevent the ratification of the eighteenth amendment in the winter session of the Legislature.

"If we can keep New Jersey from ratifying the amendment at the coming session, the first victory in the skirmish against the federal amendment will have been won," said George P. Carroll, of Elizabeth, retiring president.

The support of the association was pledged to Senator Edward L. Edwards, of Jersey City, Democratic nominee for governor, who promised his co-operation.

The convention favored immediate recognition of the Irish Republic. Albert Illinger, of East Rutherford, was elected president. Other officers are: William Duhe, West New York; Leo Salisbury, Phillipsburg, and William Hartman, of Camden, vice presidents; John Weither, Jersey City, secretary; and Theodore Bernhardt, West Hoboken, treasurer.

Taft Goes Back to Yale

New Haven, Sept. 27.—William Howard Taft, who was granted leave of absence from Yale University to assume the chairmanship of the War Labor Board, will resume his teaching duties at Yale immediately as Keat professor of law in the college and as professor of constitutional law in the school of law.

LORD GREY ON WAY TO WASHINGTON

British Ambassador Reached New York Last Night—Ready to Assume Post

SUCCEEDS LORD READING

By the Associated Press. New York, Sept. 27.—Viscount Edward Grey, the new British ambassador to the United States, who arrived here yesterday from London on the steamer Mauretania, debarked today to go to Washington, where he will present his credentials. The viscount spent the night on board the steamer.

Viscount Grey, who succeeds Lord Reading, will serve as special ambassador until a permanent representative is appointed by the British government, which compelled him to withdraw from public life for three years, the new ambassador said in his mission to this country would be "comparatively short."

The viscount declined to discuss anything of a political nature stating that he did not wish to enter into any such discussion until he had presented his credentials. He issued a prepared statement, however, in which he declared he had not come to America to put forward any new proposals, for treaties and alliances but to promote the existing good will between the British and American people.

The statement follows: "On my arrival here I wish to take the first opportunity of saying what a special appeal it made to me when I was asked to undertake the duties of British ambassador to the United States. So much good will has been shown to me already by American as well as British friends that I feel both grateful and encouraged. My regret is that the partial failure of sight, which has made me withdraw almost entirely from public life for nearly three years, and which makes all public work difficult, renders it impossible for me to undertake the duties of a permanent ambassador and must make my mission comparatively short. I am much looking forward to my stay among you, and I would like to try to convey in a few words why this mission to the United States appeals to me as nothing else in public life now does."

"We have to make a new start after the war to repair and to rebuild the old world which the war has left in ruins. We wish to build a better one, but the British empire, in common, I am sure, with other countries, feels that without good understanding and friendship with America international progress is impossible and even national security is doubtful. I do not come to put forward any new proposals for treaties or alliances. I am not charged with any mission of that kind. Good understanding can best be established on cordial feeling between the peoples."

"There are some things that do not exist in common between any two other countries—a common language is one of them—which make strongly for friendship between the American and

GERMANS ORDERED TO QUIT LITHUANIA

Paris, Sept. 27.—(By A. P.)—The Supreme Council decided today to send the German Government, through Marshal Foch, a note demanding the evacuation of Lithuania by German troops under drastic penalties for noncompliance.

The note informs Germany that her provisioning will be immediately stopped and the financial arrangements she has requested be held up if Lithuania is not evacuated.

The Foch note is being prepared in answer to a communication from the German Government, which said forces under General von der Goltz were being retained in the Baltic provinces because it was impossible to prepare a plan of evacuation at present.

American experts, the newspaper says, suggested these measures.

5 BARRELS OF WHISKY GONE

Distillery Robbed Despite Revenue and Company Guard. Eddington, Pa., Sept. 27.—Five barrels of whisky and one of pure alcohol, valued at more than $1000, have been stolen from the establishment here of the Philadelphia Pure Malt and Whisky Distilling Company.

Two guards, one employed by the distillery and the other a United States revenue official, were stationed in the buildings. The door was opened by smashing the lock, and the thieves rolled the barrels a quarter of a mile across fields to the Bristol pike, where they were loaded on a motortruck.

Both guards say they were in other parts of the buildings about the time the burglary was committed.

Scranton Carmen Get Increase

Scranton, Sept. 27.—Employees of the Scranton and Binghamton Railway, an interurban road tapping Wyoming and Susquehanna counties, who had threatened to go out on strike next Monday, were yesterday granted an increase in wages of four cents an hour. This gives them forty-nine cents an hour. The new rate is retroactive to September 1.

VISCOUNT BERTIE DIES

Served as British Ambassador at Paris for Thirteen Years. London, Sept. 27.—(By A. P.)—Francis Leveson Bertie, first viscount of Thame and British ambassador to France from 1905 to 1918, died suddenly here yesterday.

Viscount Bertie, who held Britain's blue ribbon post at Paris during the trying war times, was seventy-five years old. He was the second son of the sixth earl of Abingdon and entered the foreign office in 1863, serving in various capacities until 1894, when he became assistant undersecretary for foreign affairs.

In 1903 the ambassadorship at Rome was vacant. Mr. Balfour asked Bertie what were the necessary qualifications for the post. Bertie named them, never thinking of himself in connection with the office. Next day he was appointed. Dressed in tweed knickerbockers, he was not recognized by the Italian reception committee when he reached Rome and escaped the official greeting. He was democratic in tastes.

In 1905 he was sent to Paris, serving with distinction until his resignation in 1915. He was advanced to the peerage in 1915. In 1874 he married Lady Feodorovna Wlesley, daughter of Earl Cowley, a beautiful woman, known, with her sister, in Paris political circles because of their reticence as "Les Angles de Silence," "the Angels of Silence."
