

How Uncle Sam spends our money

"The prodigal son was a liberal spender," says Uncle Joe Cannon, in October Harper's, commenting upon present government expenditures, "but he was not put in charge of the family purse." In this article the veteran ex-speaker, in his delightfully philosophical and characteristic way, frankly tells many things which the public should know.

In this issue will also be found the story of Marshal Foch, the man, written by one of his closest friends—an intimate portrait of the famous French soldier, as his friends and family know him.

These are but two of a score of equally entertaining features in the

THUG ROBS WATCHMAN

Bakery Employee's Supposed Assailant Can't Explain Blackjack

A negro attacked Robert Hepburn, a watchman at Hutchinson's pie bakery, Thirty-third and Walnut streets, early today and stole his wallet, containing $21.

Shortly after the attack Walford Young, of Forty-second and Brown streets, was arrested on suspicion by Patrolman Fay, of the Thirty-second street and Woodland avenue station.

Young asserted he was not in the neighborhood at the time. The prisoner said he was a graduate of Union University, but could not explain why he carried a blackjack. He was held without bail for a further hearing by Magistrate Harris.

BURR-HAMILTON PISTOLS WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

Weapons Claimed to Have Been Used in Famous Duel Will Be Offered Here to Highest Bidder

IF INANIMATE things might talk, think what a marvelous tale of adventure, political intrigue, romance, enmity and friendship the Burr-Hamilton dueling pistols might tell!

What is claimed to be the original pair of pistols used by Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton in their famous duel more than 115 years ago at Weehawken, N. J., will be offered for sale as a part of the Caesar Rodney estate, in this city, next Monday.

Caesar Rodney was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The tradition in the Rodney family is that these pistols were presented to Caesar Rodney by Colonel Aaron Burr, his intimate friend. Later on in history Rodney, as attorney general under President Jefferson, had to prosecute his friend Burr for treason.

It was in 1801 that Aaron Burr was defeated in his candidacy for President of the United States. Jefferson won the most votes and Burr was made Vice President. In 1804 he ran as an independent candidate for governor of New York and was again defeated. He blamed both defeats on Hamilton, and it was political disagreement which led to the duel at Weehawken, July 11, 1804.

Hamilton fired his pistol in the air and was killed by Burr. The pistols, of the long, heavy type of that period, have just been ciled and polished up so they are in working order. Hundreds of other historical articles are included in the sale. There are five mahogany Chippendale chairs, said to have been made in Philadelphia about 1790 and used by George Washington during his presidency in the mansion occupied by him in this city. At the end of his second term as President, Washington is said to have ordered all the furniture in his Philadelphia house sold at public sale. These chairs were later acquired by the late Colonel Frank M. Etting, curator of the State House. He presented one to Independence Hall, and these five were inherited by Colonel Etting's nephew, the present owner.

There are also pieces of furniture which formerly belonged to Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, signer of the Declaration of Independence; a life-size portrait of Washington painted by Thomas Sully from the original by Stuart for a member of Daniel Webster's family, and other furniture and relics from the estate of the late Judge Jesse S. L'Amoreaux.

EXPLAIN FRATERNITY SPLIT

Delta Phi, at Penn, Assails Rules of Interfraternity

The Delta Phi Fraternity, Eta Chapter, University of Pennsylvania, criticized for withdrawing from the interfraternity agreement, May 14, 1918, has issued a statement pointing out its present attitude.

The fraternity, it says, is willing to enter into "a practical agreement at any time which can be honestly observed." A system with such intricate rules as to do, public support is characterized as immoral in nature and tendencies. The fraternity withdrew from the interfraternity when 76 per cent of its members and graduates went into the war.

BARS ANTICIPATE REMOVAL OF BAN

Some Sell Almost Openly and Others Expect Permission in Few Days

ASSURANCE IS CLAIMED

Saloonkeepers in all parts of Philadelphia are getting ready today for the expected order from Washington permitting them to resume the sale of whiskey and other intoxicants.

And with these preparations came the solemn question, voiced by thirty patrons of the bars: "What will be the price of whiskey and beer?"

There is no probability, it was said today, that the prices even in the cheapest places will fall below twenty-five cents a glass for whiskey.

Old-Time Activity

Persons in the streets early today noticed unusual activity in the saloons. Many of them showed the old-time early morning bustle of preparation for expected rush of business.

This renewed activity, it was explained, was due to a report that the sale of liquor would be permitted within a few days. Some of the saloonkeepers were so sure that they would soon be permitted to sell legally, it was said, that they commenced to sell almost openly on the basis of this expectation.

Department of Justice agents have been unusually busy during the last few days. It is said that they have obtained a mass of evidence against saloonkeepers who have grown careless because of the expected "lifting of the lid" by the government.

Reason for Optimism

The optimism of Philadelphia, New York and Chicago liquor dealers over the termination of war-time prohibition, according to a report from Washington today, is due to a statement by a member of President Wilson's cabinet to the effect that the President will not wait until the ratification of the peace treaty by the Senate before removing restrictions on saloons for the short period before prohibition under the constitutional amendment.
