Dan Carson asks Julia Grant to release him from their engagement three weeks before they are to be married. He tells Julia that he is in love with another woman, but when he goes to Nancy Cromwell and tells her of his love he discovers that she has been playing. Later Dan meets Lucy, Julia's sister, and tells her that he loves Julia after all.

THEN START THE STORY

UCY thought of what Dan bad said Lall the way home. Already in her mind's eye she was beginning to re-construct her sister's life. Perhaps everything could be patched up between Dan and Julia, after all. Lucy missed Julia. In spite of the fact that she made fun of "Julia's ideas," as Lucy called them, she secretly admired her sinter for those things in her nature which Lucy had not and never could possess. Lucy remembered Julia's sweetness of nature, her unselfishness from the time the two had been chil-Lucy remembered all that, and yet if Julia had come back to the gloomy old three-floor-and-basement house and had taken up her life again there. sleeping with Lucy and being criticized by the family, Lucy would have been just as selfish as she always had been. leaving her share of the room work to Julia and wearing her silk stockings whenever she pleased.

It was no less than a bombshell that Lucy dropped that night at dinner. Conversation was never very sparkling at the dinner table in the Grant home. The dining room was a gloomy room, even in the daytime; the gas had to be lighted and Mary, the hard-working maid of all work, was usually in a bad temper. Her feet were bad and she complained continually of the stairs. On Thursday Mrs. Grant helped out by taking care of her own floor, which consisted of a sitting room and bedroom. Mrs. Grant would wrinkle her brows. "Taffeta, blue taffeta, let me see; I don't know what that can be. They must have charged me with something I didn't buy.'

"Oh, mother," Lucy would inter-"That was to fix over your old dress, don't you remember?"

And then would be a silence as Mi Grant crushed the bills and stuffed them into his pocket. Mrs. Grant had no idea of the value of money, and although she never had anything to show for it, she spent a great deal in a frivolous manner.

This was Thursday night and the first of the month. Lucy knew that share of the blame and fault-finding this time because of Julia's absence, therefore her news was doubly im-

Mary brought in the roast and set it down before Mr. Grant, and his gaze was diverted from his paper to the little sheaf of envelopes which he eyed gloweringly. Of late the bills had been worse than ever, due to the high cost of living. If the women had but known It there were times when a sick nausea took Edwin Grant by the throat when he thought of them. Times were hard and his business brought him in no more money to meet them. And yet no one in the family seemed to think about that fact. It is so often that

Lucy chose this as the propitious moment and launched her bomb.

"Well, I saw Dau today." Mrs. Grant, who had been mournfully studying a design in the wall paper and had just been about to re-

Why Teeth Discolor

Why do well-brushed teeth discolor and decay? Why does tartar form? Why, in later years, does pyorrhea start? Millions of people have asked this.

Any dentist will tell you that the reason lies in a film. In that slimy film which you feel with your tongue. It clings to the teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. The tooth brush leaves much of it intact.

Night and day, despite your brushing, it may do a ceaseless damage. And most tooth troubles are now traced to film. Film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar, It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of many other troubles, local and in-

Dental science, after years of searching, has found a way to end it. The way is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. Able authorities have proved its efficiency by many clinical tests. And now we ask you to prove it.

Look in Ten Days

Look in ten days and let your own teeth show what Pepsodent can do.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the di-gestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So, this ideal film remover long seemed barred. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. So active pepsin can now be applied.

Millions of teeth are now being cleaned in this new way. You can see them everywhere—teeth that glisten. You can see that they are kept uniquely clean.

Send this coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film dis-
