

EPISCOPALIANS IN PRAYER-BOOK FIGHT

Doctor Tomkins Quotes Woman Who Says Low Church People Favor "Newspaper English"

SHARP DEBATE DUE TODAY

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger
 Detroit, Mich., Oct. 10.—High and low church influences are squaring off for a final fight today in a controversy over revision of the common prayer book started by the Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, of Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia.

Doctor Tomkins set the house of deputies going in a two-hour debate late yesterday by a resolution which he introduced asking for postponement of all common prayer book revision until the next triennial convention.

Although the Tomkins motion was voted down yesterday, the effect of Doctor Tomkins' impassioned speech against prayer book revision this year was so strong that the whole question was left open for further consideration today.

In the course of his remarks on his resolution, Doctor Tomkins read a letter from a prominent Philadelphia church woman, whose objections to any change in the prayer book were made the basis of Doctor Tomkins' argument. He declared to make known the name of the woman who wrote the letter.

Blames Low Church People

In this letter the high church lady insisted that the attempt to revise the prayer book is but the work of low church people, who want the service given in "low newspaper English."

Doctor Tomkins led the discussion which followed. He insisted that the present, with its many great social and economic problems facing the church and the world, is no time to take up prayer-book revision.

He made his motion when a resolution affecting a change proposed last year was brought up. After some discussion the house of deputies voted him down, but the matter came up again when the question was raised as to whether the action would form a precedent affecting the introduction later of the report of the commission which has for six years been working on the problem.

The discussion that followed showed the wide divergence of opinion among the deputies on the problem and indicates that it will be a center of controversy for several days at least. Members who represent the "low church" thought of the convention described the need for putting the prayer book in simpler form so as to allow individual clergymen to put their own personality into their services. At least twenty deputies spoke on the question, and it ended only when some moved for adjournment. The question will be first discussed this morning.

Philadelphia had part in another feature of the second day's session, Franklin Spence Edmonds spoke last night at the great "church and the war" mass-meeting in the Arcadia auditorium. He presented to the convention a service flag containing eighty-five stars and the number 105,102. The stars indicated the number of Episcopal ministers in the chaplain service. The number, in a large star, indicated the membership of the church in active service during the war.

The flag was the gift of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and was made ready for the presentation through the efforts of B. F. Finney, general secretary of the brotherhood.

Committee Appointments

Announcement has just been made of the appointment of members of the House of Deputies to the various committees.

The Philadelphia appointments thus far announced are as follows: The Rev. Dr. George C. Foley, to the committee on Christian education.

The Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, to the committee of social services.

Arthur E. Newbold, to the committee on church positions and the committee on expense.

At a meeting of the committee on the dispatch of business, yesterday the chairman, J. Randolph Anderson, of Atlanta, Ga., paid a tribute to the work of Francis A. Lewis, of Philadelphia, who for many years was chairman of the committee. Mr. Lewis is not a deputy this year.

The Rev. Dr. J. N. Carey, the only Philadelphia absent at the opening of the convention, has now arrived and has taken his place with the Pennsylvania delegation in the second row from the front in the big convention hall.

Former Philadelphians seen here today include the Rev. William T. Manning, now a deputy from New York, who formerly preached in the Independence Church; and the Rev. A. R. Berkeley, now of New Orleans, who was formerly at the Chapel of the Holy Communion. The alumni of the Philadelphia Divinity School of Philadelphia will hold their convention banquet Monday night at the Hotel Statler.

TROLLEY LEADERS BEG FAIR PLAY

Public Consideration Asked on Electric Railway Situation to Save Industry

MUST HAVE NEW CAPITAL

Atlantic City, Oct. 10.—The first annual for a square deal the street railway industry of the country ever held in the United States was opened by the American Electric Railway Association in the closing session of its thirty-ninth convention here yesterday. It said in the plainest language that existing conditions have so impaired the credit of the industry that new capital to the amount of more than $300,000,000 a year, which is "absolutely essential to the extension and improvement of service to meet the requirements of the public, is no longer to be obtained."

"The condition thus created," the leaders of the industry set forth, "threatens in all cases the impairment, and in many the abandonment, of a service essential to community growth and improvement." For these reasons the convention voted:

That the American Electric Railway Association urges upon the public the necessity for a fair and unprejudiced consideration of the electric railway situation through such of its agencies as will insure the collection and distribution of accurate information, and protect the public and the electric railway industry against further damage by the spreading of misinformation, to the end that the necessary new capital may be obtained to provide the service demanded by the public.

"Regulatory bodies must recognize the higher level of prices, if the development of city transportation is to be kept under a parity with other industries," said F. W. Doolittle, Milwaukee electric Railway. "It would be a radical man who would venture the belief that prices never will be reduced, but it is going to take a long time to fatten the lean dollar of today."

"Material costs have almost doubled with us. Labor costs have grown from an average of $600 before the war to $1100 for the current year, and labor frankly informs us its objective is a minimum wage of $2000 for traction lines."

Thomas McCarter, president of the Public Service Railway of New Jersey, failed to discuss zone fares as scheduled.
