Nancy Wynne Talks of the Horse Show-The Ball for the Orchestra Fund-She Goes to the Appleton Tea in Chestnut Hill

HAVE you seen the latest wrinkle in sports paraphernalia? I've been thinking all week what odd looking alpine sticks or canes Mrs. Charles Munn and Mrs. John Lawrence have been carrying round at the Horse Show. And then to my amazement I came upon Mrs. Lawrence sticking the end of her cane into the ground with force and separating the top stick into the cutest small leather seat about twelve by five inches, and on this improvised chair she seated herself and proceeded to watch the jumping exhibit with the greatest

Come.

I was so glad to see Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer at the Show late on Thursday afternoon. She's so good looking in her dark blue serge gown embroidered in gray wool and she had a small black velvet hat which was very becoming.

A there will be a number of affairs for charity and for other benefits during the winter. Of course, one could not and would not call the Orchestra a charity, and yet there is certainly not a worthier cause, for our splendid musical organization must be preserved. Well, there is to be a ball for the orchestra fund at the Ritz-Carlton on October 30 and it it going to be a sort of Hallowe'en affair and the proceeds are to go to the Orchestra. Speaking of Mrs. Van Rensselaer made me think of it, you know, because both she and Mr. Van Rensselaer have stood back of the Orchestra since it's very beginning and Mr. Van Rensselaer may be said to be its leading patron.

BUT, gracious! What with talking about the Horse Show and the Orchestra I almost forgot to say anything about the Appleton tea yesterday. I should say the Goodman tea. After all, it's the buds' day now, isn't it? Mary Appleton looked simply sweet, and so did Polly Goodman. Marry was in white satin and tulle, and Polly had a pinkish frock on that was simply had a pinkish frock on that was simply ding, was it not?

The bridesmaids were black lace over colored foundations. I do not think I ever heard of black lace being employed in a wedding party before, but it certainly was stunning. And very showy. And as all of the bridesmaids were fair and rather large women, the bridal party was remarkably handsome.
