

SEEK TO AMEND DIVINE CANONS

Divergent Views Confront Episcopalians on Marital Restrictions

BIG DEBATE IS IMPENDING

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger. Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—Marriage and divorce problems will cause one of the biggest debates of the fortieth triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Already there are so many diverse opinions on the attitude the Church must take on these questions that two amendments to the canon on marriage are before the convention, and deputies and bishops are already issuing pamphlets and voicing their views in the recess periods of the convention sessions.

Pennsylvanians attending the convention are showing varying attitudes. The bishop of Harrisburg, James H. Burlington, has issued a pamphlet in which he gives about 3000 words of objection to the proposed new divorce regulation before the convention, which would prohibit Episcopal clergy from remarriage of any person who had been divorced.

Wrong to the Innocent. In this pamphlet he pleads against the change because of injustice to the innocent party in a divorce case, maintaining that such strict interpretation is not scriptural and that the Church would do more to purify the marriage relation by preaching on the seventh commandment than by harshness.

An exactly opposite view is held by the Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, of Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, who is fighting for the strictest possible restriction on the remarriage of any divorced person. "I have been fighting for years for a rigid canon which will prevent the marriage of any divorced person," he said today. "I believe that every married couple should be made to hold to the contract. It is my belief that no clergyman should be allowed to remarry any person who has been divorced, no matter whether he or she be known as an innocent party or not."

nons on marriage. Canon No. 40, one of these amendments, states simply that "No divorced person shall be remarried." The other amendment is far less strict than the existing canon, and would allow the clergyman to marry the innocent party to a divorce. The present canon tries to discourage such marriages by requiring that the clergyman shall not officiate until after he has satisfied himself that the person to be remarried was an innocent party to the divorce proceedings. The backers of the less strict provision maintain that it is unjust to make the individual clergyman judge of the innocence or guilt of every person that comes before him to be married.

Plans Congregational Union. Another of the big matters before the convention that is interesting the Philadelphians is the proposal to bring the Congregational church into union with the Episcopal communion. This step toward church unity is of great interest, especially to Bishop Thomas J. Garland, bishop suffragan of the diocese of Pennsylvania. Bishop Garland expressed himself today as believing that the present proposal, which is rather loosely outlined, will be replaced by a more definite plan.

"The Episcopal church is the best basis for church unity that we have," he said, "and each general convention seems to bring us slowly toward a great plan, by which some day there will be real and extensive unity. Just now, I feel that the proposed plans are not adequate, but I feel that, out of the discussion that will come before this convention, we shall reach a better plan than any of us has thus far thought of."

There are two tendencies toward church union evident in this general convention. The more prominent is that which will unite the Congregational Church with the Episcopal Church by arranging for a joint communion and for the appointment of bishops in the Congregational Church. The plan thus far does not enter into a discussion of the differences in creed.

At yesterday's session, which was devoted to the report of the board of missions, which is to form the basis for the discussion of this work by the joint session of the national-wide campaign for $24,000,000.

Reynolds D. Brown, who is taking the place of George Wharton Pepper in the Pennsylvania diocesan deputations here, was appointed a member of the joint committee on the national campaign. It is this committee that will handle the plan before this convention and upon its adoption will set the campaign throughout the country.

Bishop Garland, in discussing the part that Philadelphia will play in the campaign today, said he believes that it will be up to the diocese of Pennsylvania, as usual, to raise about a seventh of the total amount. This would be about $3,400,000. The needs of the diocese are said to be about $2,000,000. Franklin Spencer Edmunds was appointed a member of the committee on legislation for the provinces at yesterday's session of the convention. H. P. Davison, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and directing head of

More Than 600 Delegates Attend State Federation's Annual Convention

ARE WELCOMED BY MAYOR

By a Staff Correspondent

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 14.—More than 600 women from all parts of the state gathered at the Century Club last night for the formal reception to officers, delegates and visiting clubwomen here to attend the twenty-fourth annual convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

It was the first real reunion they have held since before the war and greetings were happy and enthusiastic. Mrs. J. Benjamin Dimmick, president of the Century Club, headed the reception line. Standing with her were Mrs. Ronald P. Gleason, of Scranton, president of the state federation; Mrs. H. S. Prentiss Nichols, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Harry C. Boden, of Philadelphia; and the other officers of the federation.

Address of Bishop Thomas. Among those who addressed the convention yesterday while the deputies of Christianity To grip and hold on to the service of the nation and humanity this force which the exigencies of war brought into play is a task for which the church is peculiarly fitted.

"I have looked into the plans for the organization of the campaign and am glad to say that in my opinion they are sound and logical and, if faithfully carried out, should lead without doubt to a successful outcome."

Sixty guests attended the dinner of the Philadelphia Divinity School, held in the Detroit Athletic Club last night. About forty of those at the dinner are graduates of the school. Bishop Garland presided at the banquet.

TOWN DECORATES ITS SONS

Allentown, N. J., Gives Medals to 85 Veterans at Welcome Home

Allentown, N. J., Oct. 14.—World war veterans of Allentown and vicinity were welcomed yesterday at a celebration in which the municipality, local organizations and citizens joined to show their appreciation of eighty-five Allentown men who went to war. The event was Allentown's greatest patriotic fête and drew several thousand visitors from three counties.

The church and fire bells opened the program at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Lieutenant Sharp's Second Regiment Band gave a concert at the town hall at 9:30 o'clock, and an hour later there was a parade, with all the organizations of the town in line, marshaled by Emerson Yard. Sixteen women of the Red Cross in uniform were
