TO PUNISH FATHERS

Camden Prosecutor Blames Boys'

Waywardness to Parents Prosecutor Wolverton, of Camden

Prosecutor Wolverton, of Camden, intends to press for punishment of the fathers of wayward boys. He attributes juvenile delinquency to the indifference of many fathers.

As a test case, Mr. Wolverton caused the arrest of Albert Polanski, of 1122 Louis street, after his son had been released on suspended sentence on the charge of stealing a watch. The parent is charged with contributing to his son's delinquency.

Prosecutor Wolverton informed Judge Prosecutor Wolverton informed Judge Kates that the father had been living in America thirteen years and never sought naturalization. He charged that the father was earning big wages, and that his wife and son were also working, while Victor, the youngest boy, was permitted to become way-ward.

Camden Boy Hit by Trolley Raymond Dowdy, ten years old, of $38 Spruce street, Camden, was struck by a trolley car near his home today. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, where it was found he had suffered severe bruises of the head and body.

War Days, When Teuton Tongue Had Big Lead

French bas sapplanted German as the invorite foreign-language study at the University of Pennsylvania. So rapidly has the number of students studying French increased that now there are appreximately twice as-many as there are students of the Teu-

Before the war, the conditions were reversed, with the study of German not only leading, but claiming almost half the foreign-language students at the University

Dr. Daniel B. Schumway, head of the German department at the University, announced today that SS2 students are studying German this year. Last year there were but 518. "No matter how great the gain, however," he said, "it will never be able to overcome the immense majority attained by the French and Spanish languages during the war."

The German department formerly had more than twice as many instructors as the French section; now the latter has fifteen members of the faculty and the German department nine. Spanish is the language next in favor to French.
