Nancy Wynne Talks of the Barclay Tea This Afternoon. Dinner for Miss McMichael—Art Alliance Dinner

REALLY it does not seem possible that more than half of October is a thing of the past already, and that twenty-eight debutantes have already been formally introduced.

Today's tea will be very pretty. I think Mr. and Mrs. William Lytle, their oldest daughter, who, by the way, is named for her grandmother, the first Mrs. Jones Wister.

There's nothing else doing in the debutante line today, but the Emily McMichaels are giving a dinner out at their home, Knoll House, which is in Green Valley and Devon, for Elizabeth McMichael, who is to be married the first of next month.

I THINK the dinner at the Art Alliance will be very interesting this evening. It's being given for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hampden, Mr. Hampden, you know, played the part of Hamlet today. The drama committee of the Art Alliance is getting up the dinner, which is to be given for members of the Art Alliance only.
