

WANT "DEADLINE" FOR BUSINESS AREA

Walnut St. Business Men Urge More Policemen and Absolute Ban on Crooks

FAVOR DAYLIGHT SAVING

More policemen to guard the central shopping district against hold-up men, and the establishment of a "deadline" for crooks is wanted by the Walnut Street Business Men's Association. These requests were embodied in a resolution adopted at the noon luncheon today. Charles J. Maxwell presented the resolution.

The "deadline" proposed would take in the section between the two rivers, bounded on the north by the north side of Arch street and on the south by the south side of Walnut street.

Every person caught in the district whose picture was in the rogues' gallery would be placed under arrest as a suspicious character. Speakers made it plain that they did not want to criticize the present police force, saying the police were doing all in their power to break up the crime wave.

Another resolution presented by Mr. Maxwell pledged the association to cooperate with the National Daylight Saving Association in the fight to retain the daylight saving plan. The national association has suggested having the daylight saving go into effect next spring on the last Sunday in April and end on the last Sunday in September.

H. G. Tully, vice president of the P. R. T., explained the traction company's method of dealing with its employees and told what benefits had accrued to the company and the men since the inauguration of the "Mitten system."

He said "the doctrine of more pay and less work is largely responsible today for the high cost of living and the social unrest," and advocated a system of collective bargaining.

Washington Square was indorsed as the terminal for the Delaware river bridge.

STOWAWAY'S DREAM OF U. S. DASHED BY CAMDEN JITNEYS

South American Youth Longs for His Native Land and Lazy Life of Santa Marta. From Where He Stole Away

THE fruit steamer Vika, her hold full of great bunches of green bananas, lay quietly in the peaceful harbor of Santa Marta, Colombia, at the foot of the Magdalena river, awaiting the dawn that she might sail for this port. A small boat cautiously approached the side of the vessel, and, unnoticed under the cover of darkness, George Labban crept aboard to begin his quest of the Eldorado.

Today at the Gloucester immigrant station the quest is ended and Labban awaits the sailing of the Bowden so he can return to his native land and the lazy life of Santa Marta, bereft of his illusions. The nineteen-year-old wanderer is homeless.

It is a far cry from the little South American town to Camden, N. J. In the former place there are no jitneys, in the latter there are many, and this is the chief reason for Labban's inordinate desire to gaze once more upon the Magdalena.

It was in a jitney that he was taken from Camden to Gloucester, accompanied by Special Officer Fred W. Wallace, of the United Fruit Company, after he had been taken from the Vika as a stowaway. The machine, while passing the New York shipyards, slid and smashed into a telegraph pole, violently shaking up the occupants. Labban was scared, but said nothing.

The machine was fixed and again the trip was resumed, but a few minutes later a second smash-up occurred, this time a collision with an automobile truck. The wanderer was terrified.

"Chief," he appealed to Wallace, in his queer patois, "can't we get out of this wagon and walk?" But his plea was refused, and Labban huddled down in the back seat for the remainder of the journey with eyes closed and muttering a Latin prayer.

"De cathedral—I over be glad to see it again," he said today. "You can see out from all parts of San' Marta; not see like a frog in a well. You will be happy for my come back—he and so he talks whenever any one will listen.

MEMORIAL CAMPAIGN IS ON

The University of Pennsylvania will have a branch of the College Roosevelt League recently organized at the New York University at the suggestion of Chancellor Elmer Brown, of the Gethsemane institution.

"I haven't been in touch with New York," said William Draper Lewis, of the Law School faculty and member of the Roosevelt campaign committee of this city, "but we intend to organize the students of the University. As yet we have no committee of undergraduates at the University to conduct the campaign there, so we are not certain just what form the campus campaign will take. However, by Monday a committee will be organized."

The national body, chapters of which are being organized throughout the colleges and universities of the country, is to be known as the National College League of Roosevelt Clubs.

Because of the teamsters' strike, difficulty was experienced by workers in the Roosevelt memorial campaign in their poster distribution. The last-minute volunteering of two laborers with a team of horses working on the installation plan successfully surmounted the difficulty.

The R. I. Dollings Company, Philadelphia brokers, have subscribed 100 per cent to the memorial. The names of twenty-eight employees of the firm with a check for $41 reached headquarters today, with the following explanation: "This represents a 100 per cent subscription, every member of the office contributing toward the fund. This was done without solicitation from any one representing the association, and simply indicates the high esteem in which the Colonel was held in this office."

The first letter opened at the headquarters this morning contained a check for $1000.

TRY TO SAVE COWBOY

Women Expect to Prove Innocence of Man Convicted of Murder

Interest displayed by several women and an attorney of this city has snatched Robert M. Loomis, a cowboy, from the electric chair and is expected to establish his innocence of a murder charged against him.

Loomis, now in jail at Easton, Pa., was convicted of the slaying of an Easton woman solely on the "confession" of Charles Shrove, who later repudiated his testimony and still later was adjudged insane.

Samuel W. Casner, an attorney of this city, became interested in the case through a conversation he had in his club. Although not retained by Loomis, he determined to fight for the man's life through a petition to the Supreme Court, the youthful cowboy's death warrant was stayed. There is now a motion to reinstate the appeal for a new trial.

Profiteering by inferiority

WHEN raw materials and labor cost more, the finished product costs more. And "costs more" has to go all the way thru to the consumer; it just has to, or business stops

But profiteering is another thing; it charges more in proportion to cost than a fair margin; or worse, it charges more for merchandise that is not up to a high grade. That's the meanest form of profiteering

We know our clothing is higher priced; we wish it were not. But we shall not make it lower priced by letting down the quality. We set the all-wool standard for ourselves years ago; we've lived up to it ever since

If the time comes when we can't make what we think are the best clothes for you; worth the price, and money back if you're not satisfied—we'll quit making clothes.
