If the conference has done nothing more, it has established a new spirit of more, it has established a new spirit of understanding and co-operation between American business men and the representatives of foreign trade. The delegations from abroad, in conference with American committees and in a series of remarkably frank addresses by their leaders before the entire conference, have spoken plain facts concerning their countries needs, and the share they thought America might legitimately be asked to take in meeting these needs.

There must be semething substantial for Mr. Gompers to show as proof that his policy of working through the White House was profitable. along with him.

This was the political motive of the conference. There was mother and higher motive, no doubt, for Mr. Wilson genuinely sought a compromise to ward off the industrial disturiences which threatened on every band and which flared up even before his conference could begin its labors.

The break in the conference defeats its political aims as well as its social aims. The national administration will mevitably be drawn into acts that are notified to radical labor. The cabinet is already committed to the use of the forces of the nation to suppress all violence. Agents of the Department of Justice are already actively on the trail of the more important radical labor lenders.

Mr. Foster is watched like a German spy, dictaphone records of conversations with his radical labor clients confronted Mr. Margolis when he testified before Senator Kenyon's committee the other day. The declaration of a strike in the soft coal mines is to be followed by the taking over of the mines by the federal government. Mr. Lewis and his followers are going to be put into the position, if they strike, of striking against the government.

Administration's "Apple Cart Upset"

Administration's "Apple Cart Upset" The administration will occupy the position of hated capital. And there is no mistake about the feeling in administration circles. The labor radicals have spoiled all the Democratic party plans. They have upset the apple cart. Washington does not love them.

About People You Want to Know

in tomorrow's Public Ledger.

The man who called Kerensky a coward to his face is the intrepid anti-bolshevik leader, General Yudenitsch. There is an intimate personal sketch written by one of his close friends who knows the reasons for his success and who compares him with Denikine, another one of Russia's men of the hour.

From the pen of Dr. William Elliott Griffis, who knew him in Tokio, comes a very human sketch of Kijuro Shidehara, the youngest Japanese ambassador, who has just been accredited to Washington.

There are many odd bits of information on the page contributed by Rene Bache each week to the Magazine Section of the Sunday PUBLIC LEDGER.

And the back page, with Mitchell's sparkling humor in crayon and H. E. Johnstone's pithy wit, is alone worth the price of the entire paper.
