M'KINLEY "REVENGED" AT MOORE MEETING

Republican Nominee for Council Takes "Crack" at Costello, Who Presided

John J. McKinley, Republican nominee for Council from the Eighth district, had his "revenge"...

Congressman Moore had completed his address last night in the Empire Theatre, 4652 Frankford avenue, and left the meeting, Congressman Peter E. Costello, who presided, was running things smoothly.

Then Mr. Costello introduced Mr. McKinley as a speaker. And in that introduction Mr. McKinley was "praised to the skies" for his work as the Vire leader of the Thirty-third ward.

The calm and peaceful meeting jumped to attention when Mr. McKinley mentioned the primary fight, and how he polled his lowest vote in the congressman's ballwick—the Forty-first ward.

Then he told of a visit Mr. Costello paid before the primaries to headquarters at Eleventh and Chestnut streets, naming Mr. McKinley as his candidate.

The speaker did not say he had been "double-crossed"; he did not say Mr. Costello was not loyal to the organization. But he pointed out the congressman's son polled 1000 votes in the Forty-first ward, and other candidates polled 1700, 1300 and 1200. Mr. McKinley polled 1000.

The speaker did not object to being praised by the presiding officer, but he intimated that support at the polls meant more to him.

The meeting broke up. Mr. McKinley laughed today when he said: "I simply told the truth, and sometimes the truth hurts. Certainly Mr. Costello will support me at the election. He is a Republican."

WESCOTT CHARGES ATTEMPT AT 'DEAL'

Tells Germantown Audience He Was "Approached" Again Yesterday by Opposition

ALSO SPEAKS IN MANAYUNK

Harry D. Wescott, Democratic nominee for mayor, is making his final drive for that office. Meetings are scheduled in every section of the city this week.

He addressed two mass-meetings in Germantown and Manayunk last night. At both he repeated a story of having been approached by a representative of another party to make a "deal."

"No later than this afternoon I was approached to see if I would stand for a deal," he told his audience, at 100 East Chestnut avenue. "Now, that is a very healthy sign for the Democratic party, but it is not healthy for any one to suggest that I make a deal, for I will not."

Mr. Wescott afterward said that he may decide later on to make more speeches regarding the proposed deal. He will not discuss who the person was who came to him or what party he belonged to. It is understood that the man in question is a candidate for office.

Wescott accompanied him to the office of one of the leaders of the party for the purpose of discussing the proposed "deal."

"The only thing that will spell the salvation of the city is a strong, healthy Democratic party," he said, and reiterated that Congressmen Moore's recent utterance that "the big idea is to establish national respect for Philadelphia."

"Think of it," he added, "that it is necessary to bring back national respect for Philadelphia. National respect will never come so long as Potosicism and Varesism prevail here."

He renewed his charge that the Potosicism organization, as soon as it discovered it had a sufficient organization to re-elect the senator, offered the Vire followers a compromise for a division of the City Hall spoils after the election.

The Manayunk meeting was held at 4147 Main street. Ephraim Lederer, collector of internal revenue, spoke at both evening meetings, and urged the Democrats to build up their party to make it a vital force. Other speakers included Edgar W. Lank, candidate for county commissioner; Henry W. Branda, for recorder of deeds, and Dr. John R. Minhart, for coroner.

Democratic noon meeting today was at Brill's car works, Fifty-eighth street and Gray's avenue. This evening's meeting will be in the Sixth senatorial district, at Germantown avenue and Diamond street, and another in the Third senatorial district, at Lehigh avenue and Thompson street.

AMERICAN ARMY AVIATOR TO MAKE MAPS FROM AIR

Will Photograph Maine-Canadian Northlands Where Surveyors Have Difficulty to Reach—To Cover 3000 Square Miles

It might seem that a little thing like making a map was nothing to get up in the air about, but Lieutenant R. C. Swan, former army flier, says that's the only sensible way. He is a flying map-maker.

Lieutenant Swan, with his mechanic, D. C. Mummet, hopped off from the moorings at the Essington Aviation School today for the wilds of Quebec, where he is going to make photographic maps from his hydroplane.

The territory which this flying surveyor will map and estimate is 3000 square miles in area, and is virtually an unbroken wilderness of timberland. It is in the St. Maurice river region of Quebec, due west from Lake St. John, where few white men go.

In seven months' working time he will have a more accurate photographic map of the land, he says, than a corps of surveyors could get in ten years.

The fliers will follow an all-water route to La Loutre Dam in Quebec, which will give them facilities for landing the hydroplane at any time. The first day's flight will take them to the Maine-Canada border line, and on the second they will reach their destination.

Lieutenant Swan, who originated the idea, made a brilliant record as a flying instructor in the army. There he became familiar with the possibilities of automatic photography from an airplane. He explained his plan of operations as follows:

"When we get to our working territory I will start a series of flights all over the area, taking pictures as I go. There is only one camera that I know of that will do this work—an automatic camera which clicks off from one to ten pictures a minute throughout a flight and can be regulated to suit the altitude. It is so hung in the aircraft with the lensing that it swings with the angle of the machine in such a way that it always gets a direct and properly proportioned picture."

Mr. Mummet, a photographic corps will develop the films, seal them down according to the altitude at which they were taken and join them together. The result will be a photographic map that will give every aspect and contour of the country.

As soon as the lakes and waterways in Canada freeze for the winter Lieutenant Swan will fit his machine with camera clips for use on the ice, and will go on working until it is too cold to keep the motor running.

It will be an odd sight to see this plane hovering in the air, over the unbroken woods of the far north, sputtering through the immense solitude of the wild, and the feats of this practical and energetic American aviator will add a few thrill to the romance of the north.

BOY BADLY BURNED AS CURLS TAKE FIRE; SAVED BY MOTHER

Child of Five Tries to Toast Pretzel Over Flame From Match

His clothing and hair afire when one of his long curls came into contact with the flame of a match he was holding, five-year-old Herbert Rothweiler, 2860 Jasper street, last night ran screaming into his mother's arms. She, regardless of her danger, extinguished the flames, but not before her son was badly burned.

The boy was on the porch of a neighbor, across the street from his home, and tried to toast a pretzel his mother had given him.

Absorbed in his task, he bent closely over the match, and one of his curls fell into the flame and was ignited. Before he noticed it his clothing was ablaze. Screaming with pain, the boy ran across the street, calling for his mother, who rushed to meet him. Horrified, she tore his burning clothes from him and beat out the flames with her hands. Then she became hysterical. William Dougherty, a City Hall detective, who lives next door to the Rothweilers, sent for a police patrol and the child and his mother were hurried to the Episcopal Hospital. This morning it was stated that the boy's condition was fair. His mother was treated and sent home.
