

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of the Gost Tea Today in Overbrook. She Hears of Various Happenings Among Persons in the Social World

The Logan tea was a beautiful affair yesterday, and every one was there. And it really was nice, just going to the Bellevue, wasn't it? Today we won't have to go very far, though, just to Overbrook, where Margaret Cost is to be introduced by her parents, Judge and Mrs. Marshall Cost.

You know Margaret is a sister of Syd Cost, who was one of the five Philadelphia boys who joined the marines at the beginning of the war. They were called the "Fighting Five," and Percy Clendinning and Theodor, the last of whom lost his life in action, were the others.

Margaret is extremely attractive and about every debutante there is to receive with her, I think.

I HEAR the Joe Harrison have taken the Robert Girvin's house in Rosemont. The Sam Bells had it in the summer. Mr. Girvin had rented it in the spring to a New York man, who, I believe, was one of the boys who was sent to sea and expected to be here this season. But after he had been in Rosemont about a month he was transferred back to New York, and the house went to the hands of Mr. Bell, who has no doubt to be the Harrison's.

Sarah Harrison is the debutante daughter in that family. She has two younger sisters, you know, who will be coming out this year—Margaretta and Maud. They are very pretty girls, too, but that goes without saying. Don't you think? Who ever was not pretty? They just naturally have to be.

THE children at Miss Shipley's in Bryn Mawr, who are musically inclined, are going to give a concert for the Orchestra fund on Friday afternoon at the school, and I believe it will be very good. The glee club and the mandolin club will give two numbers, and Missie Chance and Muriel Hodge are to play on the piano while Martha Secor and Dorothy Hodge will play their violins. These children are all members of the Junior Music Club, which has been such a success of recent years. There is no doubt about it, it's a great thing to cultivate music in children, and especially a knowledge and intelligent understanding of it, even if there is not a very special talent.

I HAVE seen some strange sights in the way of clothes of late, have you? They say that many of them were worn in New York, but it is only lately that they have appeared among us. I, for one, hope they won't stay very long, or only to a few are they really becoming, but I won't tell about those.

The first of the kind that attracted my attention was worn by Miss Blaine, a young beauty. She wore a black velvet frock with very short straight sleeves, at the Belgian relief of the day the Cardinal paid his official visit there.

Browlie Warburton has a very good looking frock, which is becoming to her. It is of brown tulle with gold trim and a very short skirt. She wears a very short and the sleeves are finished abruptly about five inches from the shoulder, just straight, no trimming. She wears with this frock a golden brown, turned brim hat of velvet which has a tiny bow on the side. But she does not wear this gown in the street. It was at a tea in the country that I saw her.

Lisa Norris has a brown velvet gown which has bands of India shawling on the skirt and sleeves. Her hat is a very short velvet and she wears a very good looking sort of oriental turban with it.

I KNOW you like to hear about Ellen. I always do. Well, you see, as I said the other day, the family has moved lately, and Ellen took her Ellen up to the attic with her and remarked as she straightened things: "What a lovely bright room this is, we must come up here often. Mother could sew and you could play."

And Ellen, who feebled sundry dreams for a den on father's part added quickly, "And daddy could read to me."

Phila. Orchestra Endowment Fund Club women of Philadelphia and vicinity will be interested in the splendid effort being made by the Matinee Musical Club to complete its quota in the big drive for the Philadelphia Orchestra endowment fund. When it is considered that nearly half of the membership of the club have already pledged their services and contributions through other committees, it is most essential that the balance of the club members rally to the call and stimulate by personal effort all they can for so great a civic asset as our Orchestra really is. The Matinee Musical Club has always stood for the development of all that is best in music and has never wavered in doing its utmost.

Club members and all others desiring to contribute will please send their offerings to Mrs. Frederick W. Abbott, chairman of the Matinee Musical Club drive for the Orchestra, or to Mrs. Edwin B. Penrose, president of the club, 201 Bellevue-Stratford.
