

ROLLING PIN URGED AS STRIKE REMEDY

Mrs. Mary A. Wilson Tells Housewives How to Curb Husbands

RAPS RICH FOR WASTING

The rolling pin is the best strike remedy, if properly applied—and in time.

"Strikes and more strikes." Every day there are new ones. More men out of work and more families trying to stretch one week's rations over two weeks' meals," said Mrs. Mary A. Wilson, food economist of the Evening Public Ledger, at the food fair in the First Regiment Armory, yesterday.

"What would happen if the housekeepers struck?" asked a middle-aged housekeeper in the audience, and it looked as though a sympathetic strike might be considered and a walk-out ordered at once.

"I think they'll have to do it if these other strikes continue," Mrs. Wilson went on. "Something must be done to bring down the cost of living so that the children will not be underfed. Sixty-five per cent of them in children's hospitals are there because they are underfed."

"While rich people waste and labor refuses to work the prices go up and babies starve. Only this morning I passed a garbage can that contained enough spoiled and wasted food to feed the family a week. A piece of meat, a cup of lima beans, a half a loaf of bread—that's the sort of waste that raises prices beyond the reach of the poor man. A rich waster is the meanest person there is."

"But it isn't only the rich who waste. Only one in 200 buyers of meat take the trim. A family of four should not need to buy oil excepting for making crullers and salad dressings. Enough fat can be rendered from the mutton, pork and beef trim to meet all other cooking needs."

Mrs. Wilson told the housekeepers that they should strike their husbands suggested striking, but to make their strike first and with a rolling pin. "All the food economy in the world won't make up for the lack of production, and what we need right now is a combination of thrift and production so that we can all have a square meal."

The square-meal idea appealed to the audience, who dropped their pencils long enough to applaud.

In purchasing meat, Mrs. Wilson urged all housekeepers to make use of the trim, making stock from the bones and gristle, and preparing a scrapple from the small pieces of meat and gristle that cling to the bone. These should be removed from the bone and put through the meat chopper. A half cup of oatmeal and a half cup of corn meal should be cooked together for an hour and seasoned with a teaspoon of salt, half teaspoon of pepper and a quarter teaspoon of poultry seasoning.

A meat-cutting demonstration was given last night at the Public Ledger booth by Christian Ellwanger. A talk on the use of cheaper cuts of meat was given by Mrs. Wilson, together with a number of recipes. Government inspection was described by Mrs. Finlayson.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Wilson will announce the winners of the prizes in the biscuit contest.

BABY CLINIC HERE BECOMES BUSY PLACE

Physician Advises Mothers in Proper Care of Children, Diagnosing Youngsters' Ailments

"He cannot sit up alone, doctor; he cannot stand up or walk at all. He does not want to eat anything. What is the matter, doctor?"

"What do you feed him?" asked the doctor.

After the mother named the bottle formula she had been feeding the baby the doctor replied:

"That's not enough. The baby is suffering from malnutrition. Take a potato and wash it clean. Bake it in the oven thoroughly. Break it open and scrape out all the substance lying closest to the skin of the potato. Put butter on it and feed it to your baby."

This is but one of the cases that came up today before Dr. Leo J. Rostow at the clinic of the Babies' Hospital of Philadelphia, Ninth and Pine streets. While the doctor examined and prescribed for the infant, the nurse who brought the case to the dispensary noted the course of treatment prescribed by Doctor Rostow and will carry this out in the child's home.

It is an example of the work being carried on every day by this institution. It is the only hospital in Philadelphia which devotes all its resources to the prevention and the cure of diseases in babies.

It is wholly charitable and non-sectarian. Its purpose is to provide for the treatment and care of sick babies; to instruct and train mothers and nurses in the proper care of babies; to institute plans and means for the study, prevention and cure of diseases of early life. Its means of support is by voluntary contributions.

The hospital supports an institution on Manoa road, Lanerch, during the summer months.

Boy, 16, Reported Missing

Sixteen-year-old William Simpson, of 703 North Marshall street, disappeared from his home on October 14 and hasn't been seen since. The police have been notified and officers have been sent out to police authorities in the East. William is five feet tall, weighs about 130 pounds and has red hair and freckles. When last seen he wore a blue shirt, light gray suit and tan shoes.

N. Y. Will Aids Charities Here

Five charitable institutions in this city will eventually share between them the entire estate of William A. Stanton, 115 Riverside drive, New York, who died in London, England, September 29. The will was probated yesterday. They are Children's Aid Society, Children's Country Week Association, Germantown Dispensary and Hospital, Rush Hospital for Consumption and the Whosoever Mission of Germantown.

AMERICAN STORES CO.

A BIG SURPRISE TO MOST PEOPLE

What would you be liable to say to the man or woman who would tell you that most of the meats and quite a few standard groceries were being sold in the American Stores at considerably less money than these same goods were sold for one year ago today?—yet the fact remains.

Recognizing that your interest is our interest, the immense buying and distributing power of this organization is co-ordinated and operated along the lines of scientific control and economic management, having in mind the producing of merchandise at the lowest possible cost consistent with quality—in a word the holding down, and wherever at all possible, the lowering of the cost of living.

In these days when the price of shoes and all kinds of wearing apparel is soaring it behooves wise housekeepers to pay greater heed to their table cost. For this reason this advertisement should determine, once and for all, that your money should be spent where the purchasing power of your dollar is the greatest. That place, in the judgment of housekeepers who know, is an American Store.

While we concede that some goods in our line are higher, it is gratifying to us to be able to show quite a saving, as compared with last year's prices, on a number of important lines of food.

Note carefully the comparison and check every item.
