Nancy Wynn Tells of Today's Debutantes—She Talks of the Winter's Big Balls—Other Matters

THIS debutante affair for today will be the first of the season to introduce Mary, and the debutantes which Mrs. DeBosch Altman will give for Mary Norris, who is her niece.

Mrs. DeBosch Altman is the daughter of the late James DeBosch Altman, and the late Mrs. DeBosch Altman, who was a sister of Charles DeBosch Altman, who made her debut several seasons ago, and of Mrs. DeBosch Altman, who married Edith Smith last June.

Many of the debutantes will receive on the first night of the party, which will go out to the Alameda place at the Radnor station.

MARY NORRIS is the daughter of the late Richard Norris, of the Falls of Schuylkill. Her mother was Miss Sarah DeBosch, the second of the five good-looking DeBosch sisters. Mary is a beautiful and very debonair young woman with the exquisite taste for which her family is famed. She is very popular and has an awfully good time.

WILL talk about it's being a woman's privilege to change her mind, what about the man? Didn't you hear them say yesterday that to be no middle-aged ball? And didn't you also hear "There ain't no ball to no benefits?" and then the next thing you know you hear that the benefits will be given this year on December 20 and now yesterday I heard that the middle-aged ball is also on the carpet and is to be given in February on the 15th of that month.

THE season of dancing classes for the winter set in again, and tonight will be the opening of Mrs. Charles Stewart's dancing class at the Bellevue-Stratford. There are a number of dances before the class and every one is anxiously awaited over the first meeting. There'll be new members, both boys and girls, and this is the first time for entrance into the class since last year, and some will not be there who were members last year because they will have graduated from the ranks of the school set to debutante class.

Mrs. Charles de Costa is giving a dinner tonight for Helen Hope Montgomery, who will be the debutante of the first time. The Samuel Crozier are giving a dinner for Miss Eliza, who is Mrs. Crozier's niece, you know, who is another new member this year, and so are Alida Elmer, who is the debutante, Miss Fanny Baird, and Isabel de Costa, a sister of Jessie.

Mrs. Bob Le Conte will give a dinner for her daughter, Edith Stewart, before the class, and Mrs. William Drayton Grange will entertain for Frances Gerhardt, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Gerhardt.

THE dancing classes which are always held at Mrs. Robert L. Montgomery's home, in Villanova, started up yesterday afternoon. There are two, you know. The first is for the young children, from seven to nine years of age, such as Pauline Alton and Emily Hosenrath, small Katherine and Truxton Hare and others of that age. In the older class, the girls, from age from ten to twelve and among them are Nancy Throum, Emily and Alice Vaux, Constance Hatcher, Mary Montgomery, Eleanor and Conway Clarke, Katherine Stewart, Mary Clarke, Helen Chance, Alice Griswold, Nancy and Lillian Berridge and several others.

Androssin, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, is a lovely place and the large dance room is exactly fitted for such an affair as a private dancing class. Mrs. Montgomery has had these classes most there for several years.

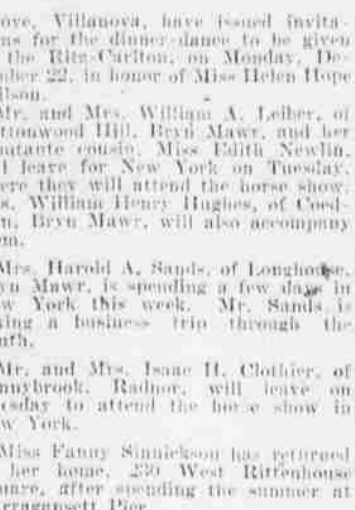

HIS almost a big boy now, but it happened when he was not so big, and so it was a serious matter when he had a very bad hurt in his neck and the doctor was sent for.

Well, the doctor came and he looked at him over and over his glasses and then he took the funny long tube out of its little case and said: "Let me take your temperature." And Jackie said, plaintively: "It's not my temperature that hurts, it's my front."
