

MARINE OPPOSED 'REDS' IN CENTRALIA

'Devil Dog' Stationed Here Tells Story of Routing of I. W. W.'s in 1917

KNOW MEN WHO LOST LIVES

There is a man in Philadelphia today who has had wide experience in fighting the "Reds" in the vicinity of Centralia, Wash., where the recent I. W. W. outbreak occurred. He is Fred F. Chitty, of the Marine Corps, at present attached to the office of the corps at 631 Chestnut street.

an outspoken opposer of the 'Reds' and there can be no doubt he was marked for death. He was a member of the Washington National Guard before he enlisted for service overseas and had always been fearless in resisting the spreading of I. W. W. ideas at Centralia.

EARLY CHRISTMAS DISPLAY REVIVES PRE-WAR GAYETY

Showings in City's Shops Promise First Real "After-the-War" Yuletide—Highly Decorative Wares Predominate

THIS is to be the first real "After-the-War" Christmas. The majority of men and women who saw service overseas are now back in the country. Shows are showing things on the high decorative style that was so noticeably absent during the war.

Since the demand for army non-patented shoes is no longer pressing, leather-bound articles suitable for Christmas gifts are taking a foremost place in shop windows.

For miles there are standing overnight cases and bags of coats, and ready-made. These are filled out with the tortoise and deer imitations. Everything the fashionists would not possibly need to sustain their heavy weight is found in these. They are filled in gay-colored moire, silk and satin.

In many cases the ivory is decorated with black and blue French flowers, believed here and there by the fashionists to be of the very best quality.

Friends of the treasury administration are keeping close tabulation upon the actions of the finance committee in the belief that a budget of less than $21,000,000 or $22,000,000 will be below actual requirements.

The budget sent by Mayor Smith, in which items have already been pared and limits laid to "come back later for use," totals but $17,800,000.

Collingswood, N. J., Nov. 14.—Building operations are booming in the suburban towns of Camden county. At least that is just what several contractors and real estate dealers believe. Seventy houses are in the course of building in this borough, as well as several garages and one automobile factory.
