

PRESIDENT LAUGHS WITH BRITISH HEIR

Wilson Receives Prince in Bed King Edward Used in 1860

WALES AT MT. VERNON

Washington, Nov. 14.—President Wilson, propped up in the great mahogany bed in which Baron Rutherford, later King Edward VII, slept when he visited Washington in 1849, greeted the grandson of that British king, in Albert Edward, Prince of Wales.

The prince was taken to the President's sickroom after he had had tea with Mrs. Wilson and the President's daughters, Miss Margaret Wilson and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre. The visit to the White House followed a motor trip to Mount Vernon, where the British heir laid a wreath on Washington's tomb and planted a cedar before the resting place of the leader of the American colonies in their struggle with England.

Soon after the President and the prince had exchanged greetings, the President noticed his visitor was looking closely at the massive old bed and told him its story—how the prince's grandfather had slept in it when he was entertained at the White House by President Buchanan and of it being the same bed in which President Lincoln slept during his years in the White House.

The President inquired of the prince as to his father, mother and grand-mother and mentioned particularly the pleasure with which he received a telegram from Queen Mother Alexandra.

President Laughs With Youth

The meeting between the prince and the President was much the same as might occur between any healthy normal boy with a keen sense of humor and a middle-aged statesman whose eyes have not driven the gift of laughter from him. The President laughed heartily at the vivid and humorous account the prince gave of his experiences since his arrival on the American continent.

The British heir was very enthusiastic at the warmth of the reception he had received in the United States. The conversation between the two covered a wide range of subjects, and after the prince had left Rear Admiral Grayson, the President's personal physician, said that the President's spirits had risen as the result of the visit and that he had enjoyed it greatly.

Wonders About "Plug Hat"

The prince was accompanied to Mt. Vernon by Vice President Marshall and Secretary Lansing and he seemed to enjoy thoroughly the drive through the Virginia woods with the sun shining for the first time since the royal visitor entered the United States.

Arriving at the entrance of the grounds of the Washington mansion, Prince Edward passed through a long lane of infantynen at "present arms" on his way to the tomb. He remained there only a few minutes and passed on to the Washington mansion.

Examining the relics within the mansion the prince showed both a youthful curiosity and a student's interest and was particularly attracted by a photograph taken of his grandfather when he visited Mount Vernon. Looking at the photograph closely, the prince remarked:

"I see grandfater wore a plug hat. I wonder if I should have done the same?"

Before leaving he signed the voluminous register of guests, beneath the names of King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Tebatou, and was introduced to Miss Alice Riggs, of Washington, a survivor of the party which in 1829, a survivor of the party which in 1829, who told the prince how his grandfather had picked her up in his arms and kissed her.

After the trip to Mt. Vernon the prince departed eight American officers and enlisted men and seven Red Cross nurses. Last night he was the guest of honor at a dinner at the diplomatic corps given in a reception given by Viscount Grey, the British ambassador.

The prince will conclude his visit in Washington today with a call on Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who, because of illness, has been unable to attend the functions given in the royal visitor's honor, and then he will go to Annapolis to see the Naval Academy.

Following the reception at the British embassy last evening the Prince, with members of his staff, motored to "the country club," just north of town, to a small dance given by Frederick H. Gilbey, speaker of the House, and Mrs. Gilbey.

The dance was hastily arranged with contemporaries of the hostess' daughters by a former marriage, the Misses Frances and Louisa Hour and the younger diplomats as guests.

TEACHERS' SALARY INCREASE IS URGED

Dr. Kendall Tells Atlantic County Institute $1200 Should Be Made Minimum Pay

RESIGNATIONS ON INCREASE

Atlantic City, Nov. 14.—Addressing the opening session of the Teachers' Institute of Atlantic county in the high school yesterday, Dr. Calvin N. Kendall, state commissioner of education, expressed alarm over the increasing number of resignations from the teaching staff.

More than 500 teachers are attending the institute and Henry Crossman, county superintendent, is presiding.

Dr. Kendall came out strongly in favor of an increase in salary for teachers in an effort to retain those remaining in the service. He suggested that $1200 should be the minimum for a teacher upon graduating from the normal school.

The commissioner made an appeal for a fund with which to buy the school house near Bordentown, where Clara Barton, a public school teacher, was employed. She was instrumental in founding the Red Cross, and the intention is to convert the building into a school.

Red Cross shrine. He asked that each pupil be invited to donate one cent toward the project. The state, he said, would accept the gift and become its perpetual guardian. Dr. Kendall also advocated improved housing conditions in the rural schools in order to make them more comfortable and inviting.

Prof. William H. Kilpatrick, of Columbia College, was peppery in his attack upon modern newspapers. He declared that both the news and editorial columns distorted the truth, and advised public school teachers to instruct their pupils to delve beneath the surface.

"I become indignant with newspapers when I discover that they fail to present both sides of a question," said he.

Professor Kilpatrick urged editorial reforms, and a change in policy generally so that readers would have a fair opportunity to judge for themselves of the truth of a matter.

Professor Kilpatrick was concerned over the future if children were not taught to assume responsibilities. He wanted leaders to join in co-operative action, which, he said, was to be the salvation of the world. Europe, he feared, was heading for complete chaos. America was on the brink, but would recover its stability. Without co-operation and unselfish aid, he feared that Europe would be a long while in recovering its normal placidity and prosperity. Only fair play and square dealing would restore this nation, he said.
