Dan Carson has jilted Julia Grant three weeks before their wedding. She goes immediately into a hospital to train, and Dan is left to dispose of his life as he will. What he eventually does is to come back to Julia, and she, mistaking pity for the old love, promises a second time to marry him. After it is too late she discovers her real love for Doctor Norville, the head surgeon in the hospital. Complications arise when Julia discovers that Lucy, her younger sister, is also in love with Dan, but Dan is determined to have no one but Julia and Julia is too conscientious to break her promise. Things drift along until one afternoon Julia decides to visit the hospital once more before she leaves. While there she discovers that he is no longer connected with the hospital. On the way home she notices a doctor's car before her home.

you and put it on top of a chair and climbed up on it. Mary and I were downstairs when she fell and when we got up there, we found her on the floor unconscious. Her head had struck the edge of the bureau." Julia was getting out of her things. "I'm going to take care of her," she said firmly. Mrs. Grant drew a breath of relief, and followed Julia up the flight of stairs to the guest room, where, without going in to see Lucy, Julia got into practical working things. The old doctor turned and looked at Julia through his glasses. What he saw in her firm young face must have reassured him and he said briefly, not professionally, "She's had a concussion." Julia went up close to him. "I've had nursing, doctor. I'll take care of her." He nodded, and, without a word, Julia went to work getting the room in order. She put away the clothes, hanging them up, smoothing some away in bureau drawers. She cleared up the floor and put everything in order and then came around to the side of the bed and looked down on Lucy's little white face. The doctor looked worried. "I wish she would come to." He said after a minute: "I want to see if she knows any one. It will mean so much for her future condition." Julia never forgot the next half hour as she and the doctor sat at Lucy's bed and waited for the blue-veined eyelids to unclose. All thoughts of self had been wiped out of Julia's mind. Mrs. Grant tiptoed in, and beckoned to Julia. "Dan is downstairs," she whispered. Julia remembered then that he was to bring her wedding ring that night and she had asked him to dinner. "I'll go down," she whispered back. "He mustn't stay." She ran down the two flights of stairs and found Dan looking pale and frightened. Evidently Mary had told him something. Julia explained hastily and then asked him to go. "You won't mind, will you, Dan? She isn't conscious yet and we are needed upstairs." He complied instantly, but lingered a moment before he left. Julia felt that he had something to say. Suddenly she knew what it was. Dan wanted to say something about the wedding, and he knew that she understood by the expression in her eyes. "I just wanted to say," he began, plunging into his subject desperately, "that I suppose it will mean a postponement of the wedding." And then as Julia drew back, "O, Julia, I know I oughtn't to speak of it now when you are so worried." He stopped at the look in her eyes. "Tomorrow, Dan does some thinking."

POOLEY STARTS 10TH YEAR

Prisoners' Friend Sent 500 Persons Home—One Returned Money

Frederick J. Pooley, general agent of the Pennsylvania Prison Society, today started the tenth year of his work of assisting prisoners in Central Station. During the time Mr. Pooley has served in City Hall he has written 18,000 letters to relatives of prisoners, asking for aid for the men or women detained. He has sent about 500 men and women stranded in this city back to their homes. He said today only one of the 500 returned the money it cost to purchase his railroad ticket home. For Mr. Pooley is keeping up the work. The refund came from a Spanish War veteran, who forwarded $17 to Mr. Pooley after he returned to his family.

Girl Held on Robbery Charge

Helen Gardner, of Eleventh street near Catharine, was held in State hall for court by Magistrate Pennock today on a charge of stealing clothing and jewelry valued at $550 from the apartment of Mrs. Mary Jones, 322 South Eleventh street.

A Sudden Sale of Men's All-Wool Suits—Special at $27.75

Such suits as these, at such a price, are about the hardest things to find on the market today. Were we to set out to buy them we have no idea where they could be found. But these suits are all because the sizes and pattern assortments have become incomplete. Men have liked them so well that we now have only a few of this or one or two of that.

Here are single-breasted or double-breasted suits, some with plain sack coats, some showing waistlines slightly raised. They're all well cut, Wanamaker tailored, and fit snugly about the shoulders and through the waist. In brown, gray and olive mixed chevrons.

Every Thread All Wool

There are fittings in all regular sizes, though not all sizes in any one style.

Bathrobe Blankets Are Here!

Sure sign that Christmas isn't far away! Large reversible blankets are in many color combinations—the warm Indian designs that men like and the floral patterns that women prefer. They are plenty large enough for the largest bathrobe that one would want to make, as they are 72x90 inches. Corals and frogs are in the boxes with them. Making a bathrobe from one of these is so easy that an amateur is sure of success.

Many people give them just as they are for Christmas gifts.

500 Good Winter Coats For Women and Young Women Are Ready in the Down Stairs Store at $10 to $35

That's wide choosing, indeed! And, though there are scores of different styles, they all have one point in common—every coat is a good coat.

The $10 coat is a big, warm, cozy one of wool coating, made with a deep collar that buttons high. It is in navy, brown and Burgundy, in all sizes for women and young women.

At $15, $18.50, $19.50 and $25

you'll find velours, pompoms and chevrons, many durably lined throughout, some partly lined with silk. The collars of many are ofoney or sealene fur and, if you prefer a coat without fur, there are plenty of these.

At $29.50 to $35

Here are many, many coats of silvertone, suede velour, pompom and kersey. A number of these are lined throughout with silk and have cape or shawl collars of sealene.

Plenty of Short Coatees

These little sports coats are much worn by young women, who find them very trim with plaid skirts. Of Hudson seal, mole or beaver fur cloths, of polo cloth, leatherette, camels' hair, silvertone and mixtures these coats are $15 to $27.50.
