Special arrangement with the Houghton Mifflin Co. Copyright, 1919, by Leroy Scott. THIS STARTS THE STORY Jennie Malone is the daughter of Black Jerry Malone, who conducts a cafe in New York...

AND HERE IT CONTINUES OF all these "cultural branches" she cared most for the work of the dancing master and the vocal teacher. Weeks passed, and months, and Jennie, watching everything, with a growing sense of security...

"You take that back!" she cried. "I'll take nothing back," snarped Gloria, at first not recognizing who she was. Then as she saw, she added in a drawl that was vibrant with anger...

"I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie.

DOROTHY HAS BEEN TELLING LIES. I'M SORRY TO HEAR THAT. DOROTHY—COME HERE, I WANT TO TALK TO YOU. YOU MUST STOP TELLING LIES. WHY I NEVER TOLD LIES WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE. WHEN DID YOU BEGIN PAPA?

Just love to run in and see what's here, and it would be something for them to talk about all the while you're in school for a year after that...

"I wish dad could have seen that," exclaimed Jennie. And the sight of those two figures in their respective positions might indeed have given grain to Black Jerry.

"I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie. "I'll not do it," replied Jennie.
