Nancy Wynne Talks of Thanksgiving Day Doings. She Tells of the Dinners Before Younger Set's Class Tonight

OF COURSE, the Radnor Hunt Club races will take up most people's time today and the rides in airplanes into Newmarket Square; then there'll be the football game this afternoon at Franklin Field, and, finally, the family dinners in town and out of town and everywhere. A real old-fashioned Thanksgiving Day.

The second meeting of Mrs. Charles Stewart Warrick's dancing class will be held tonight, and there will be a number of dinners before the dance. The George Bates Deacons will have a family dinner at their home, 2303 Spruce street. So will Clarence Clarke, in Germantown. In fact, there really will be all kinds of doings.

OF COURSE, there was much excitement yesterday when the Assembly invitations came out. And some, perhaps, who had hopes of becoming subscribers were disappointed, while others, perhaps, were pleased. A good many of the buds are among those who will subscribe this year. There's Catherine Cove, for instance, and Mary and Ellen Gledhill, Robert Thomas, Carol Ann Bately, Margaretta Shattuck, Polly Thayer, Marjorie Warden, Margaret Graham, Rosamond and Eleanor Egan, Rhonda Becker, Anita Evans, Florence Kane, Mary and Evelyn Page, Mary and Frances Wister, Susan Grove, Betty Welsh, Sarah Fox, Harriet Zimmermann and, really, I can't remember all of them.

TO GO back to Mrs. Warrick's class tonight, Stewart Warrick, Jr., Russell Lewis and Lawrence Smith will have charge of the cauldron. Mrs. Robert Leaning Montgomery will give a dinner for Isabelle De Costa before the class and Mrs. Joseph Heintzen will entertain her granddaughters, Mariel and Dorothy Hodje. Mrs. George Strawbridge will entertain a dinner at the Acorn Club for Helen and the Norman Greys who give a dinner for their daughter, Norma, before the dance.

THERE'S a big rummage sale going on this week at 213 South Broad street to raise money for a Community Center down in North. Va. The women of the Philadelphia Auxiliary Association virtually adopted the 317th Infantry, of Division 80, during the war, and it was from that part of the country that the money came. So, as they are still interested in the welfare of their pet regiment, they have undertaken to build this Community Center House and the rummage sale is to help.

They have all sorts and kinds of things; and, besides the rummage, there is an exhibition of the woodcraft toys, made by the mountaineers of the West Virginia and Virginia mountains.

The sale started yesterday, but will close today, to open again tomorrow and Saturday in full swing. Mrs. Louis Lewis is president of the auxiliary, and Mrs. Thomas Patter is chairman of the sale, as well as one of the vice presidents of the association. The other vice presidents are Mrs. John Grillob, Mrs. Spencer K. Mulford, Mrs. Robert Alexander, Mrs. J. Lee Patton and Mrs. William C. Hesse.

IT WILL be interesting tomorrow at the Charlotte Clubman Club. They are giving one of their receptions and this time it is to meet Miss Charlotte Walker, who is here playing in "Ten for Three."

Miss Walker is most attractive and is very interested in the work done by the women on the board of the Clubman Club; they have the two houses now at Twelfth and Locust streets you know, and the work is growing so it would not surprise me if they would have to enlarge soon again.

Among the women interested in the chest are Mrs. Otis Skinner, Mrs. James Large, Mrs. Stotesbury, Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd, Miss Frances Green, the Samuel Chew, Mrs. Edward Beecher Finck, Mrs. Malfon Kluge and several others.

GRANDMOTHER was teaching Katherine Mary her prayers, and Katherine Mary was seemingly pretty attentive; so Grandmother thought she was well drilled. However, Katherine Mary had heard a lot about wars and Huns and Boches and Allies "never-thing"; so sometimes she got a bit mixed. And one night recently when she knelt down to say the Our Father, Grandmother was electrified to hear "Allied be Thy name!"

VATICAN CHOIRS
THRILL AUDIENCE
Wonderful Singing and Ensemble of Organization Shown in Concert at Metropolitan

The Vatican Choirs, which made a decided sensation on the occasion of their first appearance in this city a little more than a month ago, gave another concert at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening before a good sized and enthusiastic audience, but which hardly equaled the size of the first one.

The robust choir, consisting of about fifty or sixty men and boy chorists, was, in before, under the direction of Monsignor Raffaele Casimiro Casimiro. The program which they presented last evening was a totally different one from the first and one more varied in character. Palestrina was represented by five numbers, all religious in character, except one, "Luce Maxima" by one motet. Ingegnere by a responsorium of tremendous power. Vittoria by another exquisite Ave Maria sung as loudly as the work of his which the choir sang at the first concert, and Monsignor Casimiro himself by a Misereere of great skill in composition and beauty of tone and sentiment.

As in the previous concert, the ensemble of the choir was their main feature. The control which Monsignor Casimiro has over the members in their singing is remarkable, no easy feat to accomplish when the extreme youth of some eight or ten of the children is taken into consideration. The intonation is true and the tone quality excellent.

The second half of the concert appeared to be more enjoyed by the audience than the first part, but whether because of the soaring grand beauty of the works themselves or because by that time the audience had become accustomed to the formal style of composition and was able to distinguish a sentimental beauty in it not apparent at the very first, is difficult to say. All this old ecclesiastical music is very different from the modern style of church music, and it is not easy to perceive all its beauties at a single hearing.

The biggest number on the program was "The Misereere" by the conductor, a composition which is performed in the Papal Basilica of St. John Lateran during the solemn matins of Holy Week. It was finely rendered by the choir and was well received. For sheer musical beauty the "Ave Maria" of Vittoria was probably the most effective composition on the program, and for vigor and rugged strength the "Responsory of Ingegnere" and the "Prayer of the Prophet Jeremiah" of Palestrina led. The last named also gave the opportunity for some excellent solo work in tenor, alto and soprano voices. All three had to be repeated, and the instant appreciation of the works was a tribute not alone to the excellence of the rendition, but to the intelligence of the audience as well.
