PATSY JOHNSON BOUNCES ALL THE MORE WHEN ROCKED BY HERMAN'S CHAMPIONSHIP WALLOPS

PENN BOSSES DID NOT KNOW PEARCE PLAYED WITH CHICAGO CUBS

Was Kept Out of Cornell Game Merely Because He Wasn't Needed, Bob Folwell Says

"LOTS OF RUMORS"

"PARD" PEARCE

BOB FOLWELL, coach of the Penn football team, denied today that Pard Pearce, the sensational Red and Blue back, accused of professionalism, had been kept out of the Cornell game by reason of rumors against the player.

"We didn't need him in that game and that's why he didn't play," asserted Folwell today.

Pearce is said to have admitted yesterday to a classmate that he had finished the last baseball season in the uniform of the Chicago Cubs, on the bench as a sub infielder. He is said to be on the rolls of the Cubs and due to go South with the team for spring training.

Major Pickering, the graduate manager of athletics at Penn, and Dr. John Adams, the chairman of the University Council on Athletics, both denied that they knew anything of Pearce's connection with the Cubs.

"All we know," said Major Pickering today, and he spoke for Doctor Adams also, "is that Pearce was dropped by the coaching staff. I was told that the reason for this was that he was not needed and there were too many rumors concerning professionalism."

"All this baseball stuff is news to me," said Folwell. "Just before the Cornell game there were rumors that Pearce had played football for pay, but so many groundless rumors like that have been started from time to time that we can't pay much attention to them unless there is some definite evidence to investigate. I admit that rumors about Ben Derr and Pard Pearce had something to do with their holding down the bench. We felt it was the safe thing to do, even though there was no evidence. But the real reason peace did not play was, as I said, because he wasn't needed."

The Mullica Hill farmer said he knew nothing of any investigation likely to be made at Penn on all the "pro" rumors that have been floating around, that he had not had a talk with Pearce as yet on his standing, nor with Major Pickering on the situation.

Major Pickering has not probed to the bottom all the vague rumors that have been cropping out lately on the score of professionalism at Penn.

Major Pickering said he knew that professional football teams had made good offers to several members of this year's Penn eleven, including Heinie Miller, Lou Little, Lud Wray and Hobey Light, and that he was glad the players had turned them down.

Pearce got away with his secret all autumn. He is said to have admitted to a classmate yesterday that he played in the Three-I League under the name of Dwyer and toward the end of the season was signed up by the Cubs with whom he spent more than a month, and is still their property.

Pearce says that he is now so deep in scholastic difficulties that he is anxious to leave Penn. He played at halfback or quarterback in every big game for Penn this season except in the Cornell game.

It is said that Pearce will go South with the Cubs this next spring for training.

Ben Derr is also expected to leave Penn as, after declaring himself to have played professional football, he does not feel that he should remain as a student there.

JAY GOULD VICTOR IN COURT TENNIS

Amateur Defeats Kinsella in First of Title Series at Racquet Club

STRAIGHT-SET TRIUMPH

Jay Gould, the American amateur court tennis champion, defeated Walter Kinsella, the professional titleholder, in the first of a series of thirteen sets for the open championship at the Racquet Club today. Gould won four straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 and 6-5. A big gallery was present.

Gould represented the Racquet Club and Kinsella the Squash Club, of New York.

The matches got under way at 11:30 a. m. Kinsella opened the serving and captured the first two games in quick order. Then Gould found himself on the court and took the next four games in a row. The professional came to the fore again and scored in the seventh. Gould, by his powerful strokes, worried his opponent and the amateur champion won the eighth and ninth games and the opening set, 6-3.

Easy in Second Set

In the second set, Gould had things pretty much his own way, for he annexed five straight games. Kinsella surprised the gallery by taking the next four games. Gould went into the game with more earnestness and he copped the tenth game and set, 6-4. Gould triumphed also in the third set, 6-3, coming through after Kinsella garnered the first, sixth and eighth games.

The fourth and final set bordered on the sensational, for Gould won only after playing eleven hard games. Gould took the opening and second games, but Kinsella's fast work earned him the third. Gould came through for another pair of games. Then the "pro" started in with a beautiful rally, taking the sixth and seventh games.

Gould took the eighth, but Kinsella couldn't be denied, and he scored in the ninth and tenth. Then Jay Gould put up his usually snappy work in pinches and won the eleventh game and set, 6-5. The fourth game was the best of the day, for both men put up a beautiful rally.

In Old-time Form

Jay Gould played in his old-time form, and his layoff didn't appear to affect his game. His returns and dedans were perfect, and his close network also was a revelation.

Mr. Wear, national doubles racquet champion, officiated as referee; Fred C. Tomkins, of the Racquet Club, was the marker, and Jack Soutar, world's racquet champion, called the faults.

Four more sets will be held on Thursday, and if the championship is not settled by that time five more sets will be the program on Saturday. Should Jay Gould win the title he will be awarded a silver cup, while, on the other hand, Walter Kinsella, the professional, gets $2000, win or lose.

SIX-DAY CYCLISTS FAR BEHIND RECORD

Chardon and Tiberghein Trail by One Lap—All Others Are Tied

CLARENCE CARMAN IS OUT

New York, Dec. 2.—The first fourteen teams were still tied at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the thirty-ninth hour, with Lang, of the Long Island team in the lead. They had covered 760 miles and seven laps at that hour, with the team of Chardon and Tiberghein one lap behind. The record for the thirty-ninth hour is 823 miles and two laps by Lawson and Drobach in 1914.

New York, Dec. 2.—At 1 p. m., the thirty-seventh hour, all the teams in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden were tied at 725 miles 6 laps, except Chardon and Tiberghein, who were still a lap behind. Eaton was in the lead. The record for the thirty-seventh hour is 784 miles 9 laps, made by Cameron and Kaiser in 1915.

Clarence Carman retired from the race at 9:45 a. m., suffering from sore knees. His partner, Lang, has four hours of non-riding time in which to team up with another rider in a new combination.

Wild sprints kept the crowd, which jammed Madison Square Garden in a deafening uproar. The old arena was filled from cellar to roof. Even the inner enclosure was black with standees, and the enthusiasm of the mob ran riot while the riders raced around the enclosure during the series of sprints.

THOMAS OR HOPPER WILL CAPTAIN PENN

By EDWIN J. POLLOCK

THE Penn football season closed with the victory over Cornell on Thanksgiving Day, but there's a little matter which must come up for settlement before the gridiron year is officially ended. Somebody has to be elected captain for the 1920 campaign.

There are five men on the squad who can be considered eligible for the post. These are Bud Hopper and Ray Miller, ends; Eddie Maynard, tackle; Bob Bruner, halfback, and Carl Thomas, guard.

Not all of this quintet were regulars, but it is reasonable to expect that they will be if they return next year. That is if they return. According to words spoken around the campus, it is scarcely likely that either Ray Miller or Maynard will be back.

This brings the five eligibles down to three with Bruner running third. The Easton boy has played only one year, and has two more years of football. Both Thomas and Hopper are juniors, and 1920 will be their last of collegiate gridiron participation.

It probably will be the East against the West in the selection of the captain. Hopper is from Kalamazoo, Mich., while Thomas is a product of our own Central High. They are members of the same fraternity.

Thomas already has held one captaincy at the University. He was the leader of last year's crew, and also stroked the varsity shell. In view of the fact that this honor was bestowed on him, Hopper looks like Bert Bell's successor.

Hopper played his first year at Penn last season and was so good at end that he was given a berth on Walter Camp's All-American team. He is the only Quaker to get a place on Camp's first team since Roy Mercer in 1912.

It must be admitted that 1918 did not show the best class of football, but in justice to Hopper it is only fair to add that many believed he would have won an All-American post in normal times. By Dickson, an end himself back in the old days and a man whose judgment of football players is greatly respected, said Hopper was one of the best wingmen he ever had seen.

Hopper had a tough battle this season with Ray Miller in the scrap for the regular left end. Heine Miller had the other wing clinched, but it was a toss-up between the other two for the portside of the line. Folwell said they were about even in his estimation and decided to alternate them. Hopper is not the rugged player of Ray Miller's type, but he is more polished.

Folwell had considerable trouble this year in getting his ends to follow instructions. Under the Penn system of play the wingman is supposed to knock down the interference on end runs and off-tackle plays and to let the defensive halfback take care of the man with the ball.

If the end tries for the man with the ball and misses, the interference hits the secondary defense intact and a gain of 15 or more yards usually results. This shows the necessity of the ends dropping the interference and then trying for the runner. Hopper was one end whose first act was to take care of the interference.

SCRAPS ABOUT SCRAPPERS

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

A BRACE of Philadelphia welterweights who have been passed up in local competition with the result that they have been forced to seek other pugilistic pastures to fling fists will get together in the same ring here tonight. They are Eddie McAndrews, of Manayunk, and Joe Welsh, of Southwark. This pair will throw gloves at each other in the feature fracas at the regular weekly show of the Auditorium A. A., Labor Lyceum, Sixth and Brown streets. Marcus Williams has four other well-matched bouts scheduled, viz.: Danny Ferguson vs. Herman Miller, of Baltimore; Mickey Devers vs. Jimmy Lavender, Charley McKee vs. Al Burgy and Harry (Young Brown) vs. Young Marino.

Barney Malone, who served in the British army during the great war, is boxing under the name of Soldier Jones. He participated in the elimination tournament in London, in which Joe Beckett was returned the winner.

Johnny Mooney insists on saying "Not a word," although it has been reported that the "Sh Sh" matchmaker has made an acceptable offer to Fred Fulton for a bout at the National with Frank Moran.

Dominick Torterich is negotiating for a twenty-rounder between Benny Leonard and Jack Britton at New Orleans. The chances are he won't get the bout because Britton wants a guarantee of $50000 and "there ain't so much money" in New Orleans.

Patsy Gorman, Port Richmond sportsman, has decided that there is room for another boxing club in the northeast section of the city. He is planning to reopen the Nonpareil A. C., but Patrick refuses to make known any definite facts.

Jack Harris's hand has healed. He will make his return appearance in the ring at the Gayety tomorrow night. "Don't know who I meet," says Jack, "but they tell me it will be some big heavyweight."

Benny Leonard, it has been learned, "earned" 3800 honest-to-goodness Philadelphia dollars for his tango with Soldier Bartfield on Turkey Day. He admits having suffered from a severe cold on that day.

George Mason, an English 115-pounder, makes his American bow at Bayonne, N. J., tonight. He meets Willie Burns in an eight-rounder.

Whitey Fitzgerald has been boxing well, although not often. Johnny Loftus is confident that Fitz can hold his own against the best of the local lightweights. Whitey licked Preston Brown in his last bout.

West Point, Dec. 2.—Those who receive commissions next year and have therefore played their last football for the Army are: Kiefer, Travis, Vogel, Daniel, Blake, Lystad, Schabacker, Herrick, Gregory, George, Byers and McQuarrie. Of the varsity men only Breidster, guard; Greene, center, and Wilside, quarterback, will remain. Storck and Davidson, substitute linemen, will also be available.

Albert Rogers was elected manager for the 1920 season.

The following men were awarded letters: Knowlton, Sangree, Miller, Carey, Cashey, Toogood, Pierce, Howlan, Crossman, Kearney, McIntosh and Brown. Numerals were awarded to Fitts, Paxson, Van Sickle, Hauss and Arrowsmith.
