of Congress addressed to a co-ordinate severance

Now nothing worse could happen in the present crisis than a division between President and Congress upon the policy to be pursued toward Mexico. Carrana would make the most of a resolution directing a breach of such relations as exist with Mexico upon which the President refused to net. Such a situation would make the United States a laughing stock across the border.

a laughing stock across the border.

Nor are relations with another country to be lightly broken. A severance of relations is not a declaration of war. But it is almost always followed by war. When President Wilson sent Count von Bernstorff home every one knew that war with Germany was almost sure to follow, and in fact war did follow in a few weeks.

Senator Fall, in particular, has been co-operating with the secretary of state. He was closeted with Mr. Lansing for an hour and a half one day last week. This gives peculiar interest to Mr. Fall's resolution calling for a break, but the secretary of state cannot go much farther than he has gone without thoroughly understanding how far his chief is willing to go.

Resolution Seems III-Advised Indeed, the Fall resolution, if it represents anything more than the wishes of Seantor Fall, seems a little il-advised since the attitude of Mr. Wilson is unknown. The committee, getting along very bappily with Mr. Lausing and enlowing its new participation in and enjoying its new participation in foreign affairs, does not want to do anything to put the secretary of state in

This does not mean that the United States, at least the United States Senate, does not mean to carry out, if necessary, the threat to break relations, but the hope back of the resolution is that Carranza will be brought to his senses by a threat of a relations, but the hope back of the resolution is that Carranza will be brought to his senses by a threat of a Secretary Lansing has been the real head of the State Department since the President's illness. He has directed the country's foreign policy. He has taken the various steps in the Mexican policy hoping that each one would bring Carranza to his senses. He perhaps has had little choice, and if the President had been well, the policy might not have been different.

But the steps have led to a certain temporary impasse in the absence of consultation with the President.

It is disinclined to pass the Fall resolution unless Mr. Lausing approves its passage, and Mr. Lausing approves its passage until he knows the will of the President.

Up to the present the moves of both sides in the Mexican tangle have been, in effect, bluffs. The Fall resolution appears to be the latest and strongest.

Confidence is felt here that Carranza must yield. But there is no escaping the conclusion that this country is committed, to a certain extent, to a policy with regard to Mexico, without the President's approval.

This is one of the difficulties arising from his illness. There is no unity or certainty about the administration's policy.
