SYNOPSIS

Virginia West is sent to boarding school and there becomes the chosen friend of Kathleen Foster, one of the older girls. The two girls are entirely different, and Kathleen is utterly selfish. When, through choosing the east for the school play, it is discovered that Virginia has a talent for miming and is given a leading part, Kathleen is jealous for fear of being eclipsed. The night of the play Virginia is introduced to some college men, friends of Kathleen, and inadvertently Virginia and Jimmy Anderson discover Kathleen in the arms of a man she had met for the first time that night. Kathleen tells Virginia later that she is engaged to him.

THE next day the entire school buzzed with gossip. After chapel Miss Masland sent for Kathleen and forbade her ever to wear the dress in the school again. Kathleen changed her shoulders and as soon as she was out of the room laughed. The dress had served her purpose and she could find use for it elsewhere. Certainly she could wear it when she visited Virginia at Christmas time.

The girls were all extravagant in their praise of the way she had looked and the jeweled pin fastened to her blue serge dress proclaimed a certain conquest. Only Virginia said nothing. Kathleen was engaged and yet she did not act as Virginia had always thought a woman acted the morning after she had promised to marry the man she loved. It was all very strange.

Virginia came in for some part of the general comments. Jimmy Anderson had eyes for one but not for Bunny Heron said delightedly. "You'd better look out for Hope. He used to come to see her."

Hope Deering was one of the handsomest girls in the school, but she rode rough-shod over the feelings of every one. Virginia was in constant fear of Hope's biting tongue, and she was conscious of a queer little feeling of disappointment that Jimmy should have liked Hope. She could not account for that feeling, and yet all during the day her thoughts went back to last night and that moment on the stairs when his fingers had caught hers and she had pulled her hand hastily away. She recalled, too, those laughing brown eyes, and the big-brotherly fashion in which he had taken care of her. She liked Jimmy Anderson, there was something trustworthy about him.

A few days later Kathleen called Virginia over to her after the gymnasium period, and told her some news.

"The car's going to drive over from Grant in a racing car and they want us to meet them and go for a drive," she finished.

"But it's against the rules," Virginia protested.

"What if it is? Heavens, Virginia, aren't you in for any fun?"

"Oh, Kathleen, I couldn't do that. I just couldn't. I want to, you know. I do, but we'd be expelled if we were caught."

"We won't be caught. I tell you, Hope and I used to do it all the time."

Virginia stiffened. So Hope had gone to meet Jimmy in this underground way, sneaking out and breaking rules in order to see him. Even if Virginia had not been quite determined before not to break rules, this would have decided the matter for her.

"You won't go?" Kathleen asked incredulously.

"I can't."

"All right; then I'll ask Hope."

Kathleen bore Virginia no malice because she had refused to go driving that afternoon. She had seen that Virginia, because she did not care particularly for Hope, but she had just as good a time. She confided to Virginia after dinner that she really did believe that she was in love with Bill.

"He told me all about himself, and, my dear, he's poor, and he lives with his mother and sister in a dinky little town in Pennsylvania, and I don't seem to care a bit."

Virginia wanted to ask about Jimmy, but she did not feel that she could. And then Kathleen said something herself.

"Jimmy was furious that I had brought Hope for him. He doesn't care anything for her any more." And with this remark had the power to hurt Virginia. It implied so clearly that Jimmy was fickle.

THERE'S genuine fun in making pictures, and there is growing pleasure in the pictures themselves. It isn't looking back at old times, it's looking at them. For a Merry Christmas Kodak is the very thing John Haworth Company Eastman Kodak Co. 1020 Chestnut St.

A warm home at little cost—an oil heater With an oil heater you can heat any room in the house in a jiffy. It is light and portable—can be moved to any desired room. It is much less expensive than a big furnace fire. Think of the saving, with coal at its present price and with the apparent shortage of coal every showful you save will mean a great deal later. With an oil heater it is only necessary to keep the furnace to a point that keeps the chill out of the house. The "Ideal," "Elin," "Adelphi," "Perfection" and "Florence" are all good, dependable makes guaranteed to give satisfaction. A very practical and useful Christmas gift suggestion.
